NO. 145—NINETY-NINTH YEAR — VICTORIA, BRITISH COLUMBIA, SUNDAY, JUNE 2, 1957 — 10 CENTS DAILY 14 CENTS SUNDAY — 64 PAGES

Leave it to the French—Saying "Thank you, Victoria" in typical Shriner fashion, and enjoying every minute of it, is Joe Moreau of Seattle's Nile Temple Drum and Bugle Corps. On the receiving end is pretty Marian Blanc, 20, of Duncan. See story, page 17.—(Colonist photos by Ted Harris.)

'Thank You, Victoria'

Listening to the oom-pah-pah from Dave Townsend's tuba is 11-year-old Roberta Ratcliffe, who was guest of honor at the Shriners' pageant in Memorial Arena last night. Roberta, both of whose legs are held rigidly in steel braces, represented the thousands of crippled children helped by Shriners all over North America.

Two Big Sweep Tickets in City

She Had to Leave Ireland To Find Luck in Victoria

$140,000 At Stake Wednesday

A Victoria woman who never bought an Irish Sweepstake ticket until she came here from Ireland less than three years ago is one of two city residents who may win up to $140,000 in the sweep on England's Epsom Derby Wednesday.

First draw yesterday named 22 Canadians as ticket holders, the only ones on Vancouver Island being Mrs. Kathleen Bones, 1762 Carrick, and an unidentified Victorian who used the nom-de-plume "Lucky Us."

The draw will conclude Monday with the prize fund set at $6,206,000. There will be 18 first prizes of $140,000 each, 18 second prizes of $56,000 each and 18 third prizes of $28,000 each.

Ticket holders whose horses run out of money will receive approximately $1,200. Holders of non-starters receive anywhere from $56 to $280.

SECOND TICKET

Mrs. Bones and her husband Robert, a 49-year-old plumber who works for Flanders Installation Ltd. in Crofton, bought two consecutive tickets.

The lucky one was NHW 18489, drawn on the horse Mystic Prince.

"I never made a habit of buying any in Ireland, said Mrs. Bones, who came here after two of her four children immigrated to Canada. "But we took a notion to do it over here."

"I don't know yet if I'll give my husband any of the money, I haven't had time to think," she said. "We haven't made any plans to spend it because we haven't got over the shock yet."

The other lucky Victorian, "Lucky Us," drew ticket NHV 26218 on the horse Master Effort.

Other B.C. ticket holders, names or nom-de-plumes, their ticket numbers and horses are:

G. Gahrns, Vancouver, NDV 10637, Ballymoss; Lucky 13, Vancouver, NHS 85908, Ballymoss; Billy, Vancouver, PRS 09503, Alcastus; Barry Holly Lee, Vancouver, PRS 90964, Crepello (the favorite); Timmy, Vancouver, NHS 89718, Zeitoun; Helen Young, Vancouver, PQT 86767, Royaumout; Dog House, Burnaby, PQA 82119, London Cry; Paul Perron, Marguerite, NEP 74240, Messmate; Penny One, North Vancouver, PRV 44275, Prince Taj.

The Irish government takes approximately $658,000 in stamp taxes while another $1,974,000 is to be distributed to hospitals.

Luck o' the Irish

Smiling in anticipation are Mr. and Mrs. Kathleen Bones, 1762 Carrick, who came here from Ireland three years ago. Mrs. Bones drew a ticket on Mystic Prince in the Irish Sweepstake.—(Colonist photo by Jim Ryan.)

'Look Again At Embargo'

From AP, UP, Reuters

Britain's decision to expand trade with Communist China brought a call yesterday from a United States Senate Democratic leader for a "new look" at U.S. policies on trade with the Reds.

Senator Lyndon Johnson said the U.S. "must frankly face the fact that the British action will require us to re-evaluate the Chinese trade situation."

At the same time, there was word from West European capitals that many nations would follow Britain's lead.

The Norwegian government announced it was relaxing the embargo on trade with Red China. A similar move was expected from Denmark and the Netherlands this week.

Senator Johnson said in Washington that Britain's decision was an "abrupt break, and perhaps a setback, to the policies we have been following." The U.S. has long supported a stiffer trade embargo against China than against Russia itself, because of the Korean War.

Liberal Fears Exposed

Ministers Rush Home

By TOM GREEN
Colonist Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA—Faced with conceded Conservative gains in the province, all five federal cabinet ministers from Ontario scampered back to their own constituencies last night with plans to remain there until voting on June 10.

The Conservatives predict they will will capture a minimum of 20 seats from the Liberals in Ontario with chances of half a dozen more. The Liberals admit they will take a loss of 10 seats in Ontario.

Both Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent and Conservative Leader John Diefenbaker will be addressing a number of meetings in Ontario in the windup this week.

MORALE GETTING LOW

The retreat, though, of the five Ontario ministers to their own ridings is causing dismay that is devastating to Liberal morale. Pressures are being applied to several of them to go out on the campaign trail again, taking their chances in their home constituencies.

Finance Minister Walter Harris had a majority of less than 3,000 in the 1953 election in Grey-Bruce and has frankly admitted he is getting stiff Conservative opposition this time. It was no surprise when he headed for his home bailiwick.

However, with National Health and Welfare Minister Paul Martin, who had a substantial majority in 1953, retreating to industrial Windsor after his tour, many Liberal candidates needing help are complaining bitterly.

External Affairs Minister L. B. Pearson is hugging the electorate of Algoma East again for the "duration" in a nip-and-tuck contest with Conservative candidate Merton Mulligan.

Trade and Commerce Minister C. D. Howe is now campaigning in his riding of Port Arthur and is slated to stay there until vote counting.

National Revenue Minister James McCann is sticking tight to Renfrew South constituency. He has been there most of campaign. His most noticeable contribution was at an Ottawa rally where he said the attendance figures given by the press for Mr. Diefenbaker's meetings in Victoria and Vancouver were exaggerated.

UP AGAINST IT

Reports from Quebec are that Veterans Affairs Minister and Postmaster General Hugues Lapointe in Lotbiniere constituency and Minister of Resources and Development Jean Lesage in Montmagny-L'Islet riding are having a tough time. Several reports say that Mr. Lapointe may be beaten.

In New Brunswick, Labor Minister M. F. Gregg is having a very close contest with the Conservative candidate, J. Chester McCrae, of Fredericton.

TORONTO (CP)—The Telegram says a confidential Liberal memorandum envisages the return of the St. Laurent government on June 10 "but with a sharply reduced majority."

The story says "the two-page document, distributed a few days ago for the sole use of key party officials, also looks to big gains by the Conservatives, a moderate increase in seats by Social Credit, and a small drop in representation by CCF."

The 265 House of Commons seats should line up like this, the telegram says:

Results at the time of the last election in August, 1953, were:

Liberals 171, Conservatives 51, CCF 23, Social Credit 15, Independents 5.

Commenting on the memorandum Progressive Conservative leader John Diefenbaker said yesterday:

"If the Liberals are now admitting, a week before the election, that we will gain 26 seats, it can be readily seen that we may gain twice that."

No Mercy In Hungary

BUDAPEST, Hungary—Justice Minister Ferenc Nezval lashed out yesterday at judges who automatically pass on pleas for clemency by rebels they sentence to death. Clemency, he said, should be the exception.

School Seeks Million

Drive to raise $1,000,000 for buildings, scholarships and endowments at University School was announced yesterday by Headmaster J. J. Timmis.

He said it started with a $100,000 donation from Mrs. R. A. Brown of Calgary in honor of her son, R. A. Brown Jr., an old boy.

That money will be used to build a new dining hall.

Red Says So

Nixon Jealous?

RICHARD NIXON

LONDON, June 1. (Reuters)—A Moscow radio commentator claimed yesterday that Vice President Richard M. Nixon was jealous because the Duchess of Kent got more attention than he did at Ghana's independence celebrations last March.

Nixon "resented the fact" that the Duchess representing the Queen of England, was "attracting more attention than himself," said commentator Postukhov.

He said the American Consul in Accra organized a reception for Nixon the same day the Duchess attended another party.

"This attempt made by the American Consul to hold a reception not included in the official program was regarded by the British as an insult and the reception proved a flop," Postukhov said.

Phew! False Alarm

Ten surprised passengers flying from Anchorage, Alaska, to Seattle last night had a five-hour wait at Patricia Bay while mechanical trouble on their plane was repaired.

A short circuit in the warning system was the cause of the trouble and was quickly fixed, but the plane had to wait for new fire extinguishers to be brought up from Seattle before continuing the journey.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

MANY a dignified man is a mischievous small boy underneath. The combination of sense of humor with a punctilious, formal and even stuffy manner is often thought of as peculiarly English.

This idea may be as false as the other national stereotypes—the thrifty Scot, the Irishman who would rather fight than eat, and the others.

However, I do know some Englishmen who conform to this idea of the national character, and for all I know there may be thousands of others. A census would be difficult to take. Enumerators could scarcely go around asking: "Now, are you a dignified man full of mischievous humor underneath?"

Englishmen who combine humor wiht outward restraint are not hard to find. Some of the classic English film comedies have humor and restraint mixed in nice proportion.

One Englishman of my acquaintance, a very proper individual at first glance, has often been led into embarrassing situations by a habit of making heavy-handed jokes.

Sitting in a bus, he observed a very wide, buxom woman friend occupying about three-quarters of the seat ahead of him, and a parcel occupying the rest of the seat.

Knowing she didn't mind being teased, he leaned forward and muttered in her ear: "It's a wonder they don't make you pay for two seats."

The lady turned around and transfixed my friend with a scowl. He had made a mistake. She was a stranger to him.

Macabre Twist

Fate added a macabre twist to another of this man's jokes. He knocked on a door, and when a close friend appeared, he said in a jocular way:

"I've come to measure for the coffin."

By a black coincidence, it happened that a near relation of the person in the house had in fact died, right there, a few minutes earlier.

There was nothing this man could do. The situation did not admit of any apologies.

Another time, my friend found a firecracker, almost the size of a stick of dynamite, lying in the gutter. Clucking his tongue reproachfully at the fact that such large explosives were sold to the young, he picked the thing up.

And then, some devilish impulse drove him to light the fuse to see if it really would explode.

He applied a match to it several times, but the damp fuse wouldn't catch. As he was giving it serious attention, he glimpsed some stuffy friends emerging from a restaurant.

It would never do to let this group of earnest men catch him playing with firecrackers. So he held the firecracker down close to his side, where they couldn't see it.

Just as he drew level with the group, the bomb exploded in his hand with a loud bang. The serious-minded men stared at him, raising their eyebrows in unison.

My friend made no attempt to explain, but hurried past with a brisk nod.

Forest Fire Hazard Grows

Increasing fire hazard in B.C. forest lands is causing concern among provincial forest service officials although the number of fires and the cost is still below that of a year ago.

So far this year there have been 451 fires reported in the five forest districts and fire-fighting costs have amounted to $12,753. This time last year there had been 1,072 fires at a cost of $174,782.

Don't Forget The Shut-Ins

Today is internationally observed as "Shut-ins' Day," when people are asked to remember their friends who are invalids, semi-invalids or handicapped.

The Shut-ins' Day Association, formed in Canada in 1942, asks that some understanding appreciation be given to those people who must adjust to a frustrating way of life.

They ask you to visit shut-in relatives or friends, take them for a car ride or send a card or gift.

It's a Leutescent Warbler

. . . And Then I Sneezed

Nothing Was Heard But Song of a Bird

By TED SHACKLEFORD

Four people stood quietly among bushes near Swan Lake the other morning, looking into a tree with binoculars. Three were birdwatchers and I was bewildered—my glasses weren't focused.

"It's a black-headed grosbeak," someone said in a voice just above a whisper. I fiddled desperately with the focusing knob in the centre of my glasses.

"Isn't it beautiful," someone else said in a hushed voice.

Just as I got the binoculars focused I found I was looking a piece of paper wind had blown into a tree, and I sneezed—hay fever.

"Oh well," another voice said, "we DID see it." And to me, "Wasn't that worth seeing?"

Eyes streaming and fumbling for a handkerchief, I agreed.

I was guest on a weekday birdwatching trip with A. R. Davidson, Mrs. Gladys Soulsby and Mrs. Phil Monckton, all members of the Ornithology section of the Victoria Natural History Society.

"Listen!" Mr. Davidson said, and we all listened. Somewhere a bird was chirping. I sneezed again and it stopped.

Nobody said a word. Just quietly continued our walk through the undebrush. Birdwatching—birding to the experts—must breed patience and forbearance.

Between sneezes we still managed to see, and positively identify, English skylarks, yellow warblers, chirping sparrows, plenty of robins, a towhee, a cedar waxwing, Seattle wrens, chickadees, bush tits, and redwing blackbirds.

And later, as we sat in the shade and ate a picnic lunch I spotted a Rufus hummingbird all by myself with its glittering green back flashing as it darted from side to side through the dappled sunshine. I DIDN'T sneeze this time, and still nobody commented.

Birding is the butt of a lot of jokes, but to the enthusiasts it is serious business combined with unusual pleasure.

J. O Clay, president of the ornithology section of the VNHS, describes it as an offshoot of the venerable English sport of birdnesting.

"It's the same sort of development as 'shooting' wild animals with a camera instead of a gun," he says.

Sometimes an unusual or rare bird is seen, such as the black-headed grosbeak, and it adds an extra fillip to the day's pleasure.

The skylarks were seen and heard alongside the Uplands golf course and a little farther on is a spot where bluebirds are often seen. They must have heard the sneezing as we approached.

"Birds tend to become commoner with the settlement of land," Mr. Clay explains. "The bush tit, for instance, wasn't known on Vancouver Island at one time. Now it has spread through the whole lower island district. Some 240 different birds have been seen and identified so far." The common house finch was first discovered in recent years at the Crystal Garden.

And a supply of hay fever tablets.

Strikes Menace B.C.

VANCOUVER (BUP) British Columbia is threatened by a number of strikes which could have a crippling effect on the economy of the province.

A conciliation board yesterday recommended a five-month truce in the dispute of 30,000 coast woodworkers. It will mean that their claim for a 20 per cent wage increase has been deferred until October.

Some union officials regard the decision as "an invitation to strike" and strike plans have already been sent out to a number of regions as a directive for any possible walkout. There has been no immediate comment from the 137 logging operators directly involved.

Meanwhile, it was reported strike is looming up. The strike that the province's salmon net committee of the Electrical fishermen are preparing for a Workers' Union met behind strike later this month. A joint closed doors last night to decide committee of fishermen report when to call a walkout of about ted that negotiations for new 50 civic electricians.

fish prices have broken down because the operators refuse to make an offer. The strike deadline is June 22, the opening of the fishermen's season unless their demands for a 30 to 50 per cent over the 1951 salmon price are granted.

Riot-Ridden Town Elects New Mayor

VILLE JACQUES - CARTIER, Que. — Joseph-Louis Chamberland was elected mayor of the Montreal suburb of Ville Jacques-Cartier last night in a turbulent election that saw the Riot Act read to curb violence.

Chamberland, who supported "honest elections," polled 867 votes more than his nearest rival, Leo Millard.

The new mayor's supporters also took three of the six aldermanic seats.

Voters cast ballots at the 52 polls despite goons who roamed in cars to keep the vote down.

Police, fearing violence, hoped for a heavy downpour to keep people indoors.

There was no indication when the act would be lifted. It was expected to be in effect at least until this morning.

PHILADELPHIA — Magistrate Nathan A. Beifel disagreed with policemen that a carnival fat lady was putting on an objectionable dance by bending over and touching the palms of her hands to her toes. He dismissed disorderly conduct charges against 400-pound Jenny Katz, 41, known in carnival circles as Happy Jenny.

SEATTLE—Dave Beck said yesterday he did not "give a damn" who succeeds him as president of the Teamsters Union but then said he would take a leave of absence before his term expires "if somebody agreeable" is found as a replacement.

Political Roundup

'Black Friday' Recalled

By British United Press

Campaign fireworks were concentrated in Quebec Friday with Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent and Progressive Conservative Leader John Diefenbaker electioneering a scant 325 miles apart.

The Tory leader, pulling no punches in two Montreal speeches, charged the Liberal government with abuses of parliamentary procedure.

"These power-hungry men, a year ago today on Black Friday, misused parliamentary procedure to take a vote of closure on the pipeline debate—and rode through a bill which will make money for a troupe of mighty Texas tycoons," he told an overflow crowd which spilled out onto the street in front of West Hill auditorium.

Earlier Diefenbaker, appearing tired after his whirlwind tour of the Quebec City area Thursday, moved into the heart of French Canadian Montreal in his attempt to increase the number of Conservative Quebec seats from four.

Diefenbaker assured the autonomy-minded audience that the Tories "would respect the Act of Confederation to render to the provinces all the rights of government that are due to them."

Meanwhile, at the Gaspe Peninsula town of Matane, Prime Minister St. Laurent took the pressure off his opponents and compared the Canadian system of government with that in the United States. The 75-year-old Liberal leader, showing no sign of strain after his coast-to-coast campaign, told a rally that the political system in Canada gave the people complete control of their representatives.

"In Canada, if the majority of the House of Commons refuses to adopt an important measure submitted by the government, then the House must be dissolved and the ministers go before the people," he said. In the United States, he said, the Congress may be hostile to the president and the cabinet, but the president can remain in office anyway.

D-Day Rally

CCF Candidate Bombs Victoria

Thirteen years after participating in D-Day, former Royal Marines captain Victor Williams flew in a "bombing" raid over Victoria yesterday.

The Victoria CCF federal candidate winged over the city yesterday in an aircraft from which pamphlets fluttered down advertising a big CCF rally set for Beacon Hill Park next Friday, the anniversary of the June 6, 1944, landings in Normandy.

Mr. Williams is one of three federal candidates in Greater Victoria who can call himself "doctor." He earned his PhD at Oxford. The others are Liberal F. T. Fairey in Victoria, and J. M. Thomas, CCF, in Esquimalt-Saanich.

As a Marine, he served in 22 countries in the Second World War and was awarded the Distinguished Service Order.

Candidates' Forum

St. Laurent Dubbed 'Barnyard Rooster'

Canadian dollars are at a premium because New York bankers want to keep them there, A. De B. McPhillips, Progressive Conservative candidate for Victoria, said last night.

Speaking before a small audience in Willows School he said: "New York bankers want to keep them (Canadian dollars) at a premium because of their investments in Canada."

"There are hundreds of billions of dollars invested by United States in Canada," he said.

Changing the subject to foreign affairs, Mr. McPhillips told the audience: "Canada has no position in foreign affairs except that of the United States."

"This country simply blindly follows the U.S.," he said.

Mr. McPhillips went on to attack Prime Minister St. Laurent by telling the crowd the prime minister should be in his office doing the country's business instead of "strutting" around the country.

"He's strutting around the nation like a barnyard rooster," Mr. McPhillips exclaimed, "though I doubt if he's being as productive."

* * *

Victoria CCF candidate Victor Williams last night renewed his challenge to Social Credit candidate Waldo Skillings to meet on the same platform and extended it to include Liberal Dr. F. T. Fairey.

He termed Mr. Skillings' challenge made Friday to meet Dr. Fairey on the same platform as "the action of a bully."

"Mr. Skillings indicates he wishes to take advantage of a tired old man so he may exercise his own rather limited scope of sesquitadalia verba," Mr. Williams told a special CCF meeting.

"In my opinions," Mr. Williams said, "this is worse than so much 'guff' and shows up clearly Mr. Skillings' mental fear of a wordy wrestle with an opponent well versed in the noble electioneering art of verbal floor mopping."

SOOKE — Fish from the Fraser and power from the Columbia were stressed by Fisheries Minister James Sinclair at a large election meeting in Sooke Friday.

He attended the meeting in support of Liberal candidate Alistair Fraser, running in Esquimalt-Saanich.

Recognizing the value of the salmon fishing industry in Sooke, the minister spoke of the pink salmon treaty, markets, fisheries commissions and plans for a 12-mile offshore fishing ground.

Also present at the gathering were Sen. Mrs. Nancy Hodges and Victoria Liberal candidate Dr. Frank Esirey.

A Peculiar Decision

IN a world headed for an intensification of industrial effort in which automation and the new nuclear fuels will play an increasingly important part, Canada has taken a strange course. The federal government has agreed in advance to the disposal of Canadian uranium concentrates which are surplus to this country's requirements to markets within the dollar bloc, to the disadvantage of other Commonwealth lands including the United Kingdom. Stated agreement of purpose, perhaps not yet implemented by final contracts, if effected would route almost all Canada's exportable uranium to markets in the United States.

Some provision has been made by Canada for the bare initial requirements of the United Kingdom in its expanding nuclear energy program. The extent of this, however, was declared disappointing by Great Britain, which already is far advanced in the field and depending on lengthening out its coal reserves for the future with the help of atomic energy. The British market has been left apparently without any practical assurance of what its chances will be between 1962 and 1967 of obtaining Canadian uranium and other needed ores. Inasmuch as this country's uranium production is expected to be about equal to that of the United States in the same period, and only little of the output will be used in Canada, that could put a virtual "corner" in nuclear fuel in American hands.

Elsewhere about the Western hemisphere the occurrence of radioactive ores is limited. There is a little uranium in Rhodesia and in parts of some European possessions overseas. From present prospects, however, the chief Western supply in any considerable volume will have to come from this continent. Canada's move to sell uranium south of the international border might be a profitable one on a dollars and cents basis; but that is "cash on the barrelhead" reasoning, and from the long-range viewpoint definitely inimical to British and Commonwealth interests in the industrial race of the times. Little has been said of the matter in official circles, but it should certainly be inquired into before a monopoly of nuclear fuel can be created on the basis of Ottawa's precipitate and strange decision regarding Canadian supplies.

Time Element Important

PUBLIC WORKS MINISTER CHANT'S announcement that British Columbia's new Government House in Victoria will be designed by the government's own architects may cause some disappointment but the decision is probably the wisest that could have been made in view of the time element. That is not in any way a reflection on the ability of the provincial architects' branch. However, there were many—this paper included—who felt that the nature and purpose of the building, together with traditional background as an institution, made the project a good subject for competition among architects, as was the procedure when the Legislative Building was built.

For reasons which are obvious, however, it is Premier Bennett's expressed wish that construction should be speeded to completion so that the Lieutenant-Governor might be able to occupy the new Government House in 1958, B.C.'s centennial year. Attainment of that objective leaves little time for preliminaries, and an open competition among artists could scarcely be successful if rushed.

In any event the premier's earlier assurance that the new edifice will in all respects be in keeping with the dignity of the office, the building it replaces and the character of Victoria inspires confidence that it will be one of which the province and Victoria can be proud. On those terms Victoria could scarcely have inflicted on it an architectural monstrosity in the modern manner which, while possibly acceptable in a new city, would be an anachronism in an old and mellow one like this.

'High Ideals'

MR. RALPH CAMPNEY, the defence minister, made an election broadcast recently on the CBC's national network. He may only have voiced the statements not written them — cabinet ministers do not often write their own speeches — but the words nevertheless must be accounted his. He sponsored them. Mr. Campney listed four main reasons he claimed for public trust in the Liberal Party. They are worth examining.

First, the Liberal Party "is a party of high ideals, ideals which are expressed in the three-word slogan of the party—'unity, security, freedom'." That will be why it ensures its security in Parliament by uniting its supporters to deny freedom of debate to opposition groups.

Second, the Liberal Party "is the party of the people — the common people — the little people, if you will." That will be why it borrowed the little people's money and lent it to gas pipeline promoters, enabling some individuals to make enormous sudden profits.

Third, the Liberal Party is "the only party in Canada enjoying support in every province from the Atlantic to the Pacific." That will be why there are non-Liberals in the House of Commons from constituencies ranging all the way from British Columbia to Nova Scotia.

Fourth, the Liberal Party has built up "an outstanding record of achievement in the service of the people." That will be why old-age pensioners are compelled to exist on a pittance, war veterans' allowances are cut if burnt-out veterans dare to earn a few extra dollars, and why Canadians were overtaxed to the tune of half-a-billion dollars last year.

Island Editors Say

Dependence on Exports

Politicians with a protectionist attitude must remember always that we live by selling the greater part of our resources abroad. We lack a domestic market large enough to absorb our output and this economic fact is the inescapable truth confronting those who advocate home manufacture of everything turned out by our mines and mills.

We may have the resources and we will continue to develop our plants. There are still factors which are against us, notwithstanding. The limited home market is foremost. The harsh seasonal nature of the climate of much of our vast territory is another cost factor we cannot afford to overlook. No government can change the climate, and the disparity in population is incapable of being altered appreciably in the immediate future.

—COWICHAN LEADER

Ability to Pay

In most cases, under our present economic system we are allowed to buy as much or as little as we wish to pay for. There is one glaring exception to this pattern, however. We refer to the field of education. In the Village of Sidney the charge for education is exactly 34 per cent greater in 1957 than in 1956.

Sidney's commission felt that we couldn't afford all the fine points in modern-day education. The commissioners urged that some of the courses be curtailed, bringing the curriculum more in line with the people's ability to pay. Its resolution, urging that educational costs be pared, was turned down at the convention of Vancouver Island municipalities.

Where do we go from here? Are we to just sit placidly until 1958 when another 34 per cent increase in educational costs may be recorded?

Junk Mail

"Junk mail" is the agry apt term applied to those circulars, fliers, samples and miscellaneous printed matter which clutter up our mail boxes frequently. Most of us look upon it as a nuisance, but we wonder how many realize that as taxpayers in Canada we are subsidizing, so to speak, this nuisance?

How many know that this stuff goes through the mails for less than a postcard? How many have given any thought to the fact that the post office work is greatly increased by this junk?

This would appear to be a strange way of carrying on the public's business.

The Talent Show

We wonder how many parents echo the sentiment of the few who have recommended to us on the value of the elementary schools talent show?

From what we hear there is little enthusiasm about staging the show except from the PTA organizers. We get the impression that parents would be very happy if the show were not staged and that they only go because they dare not stay away because their own children are involved or that they are members of the PTA or that they would be objects of shame for those who did attend.

A New Partnership

Last Thursday marked the beginning of a partnership which we are confident will endure to the growing benefit of the participants, the people of Ladysmith and Saltair. While the vote on the by-law authorizing the sale of a one-third interest was not large, the result was so overwhelmingly in favor of the sale, there can be little doubt that the citizens of this community generally look with favor on the scheme.

The immediate benefits of the partnership will be: replacement of an old main from Stocking Lake to the city reservoir with a new and larger one at a saving to the city in cash outlay of approximately $30,000, an early start on the Saltair water system without all the problems involved in obtaining rights of way.

Thinking Aloud

". . . of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

A READER agrees that the public library staff are courtesy itself but complains about the narrow book alleys and high and low shelves. She says that if two people stoop at the same moment in the same alleyway they are apt to bump, gingerly or otherwise; that to read the top-shelf titles you need a magnifying glass; and that to read the bottom ones you have to sit on the floor.

The answer is that if the books weren't crowded into their present space half of them wouldn't be on display at all. It's purely a matter of that bugbear — money. The staff would love to spread onto another floor but this would mean additional costs and the library budget is inexorable. Book lovers, I am afraid, will have to put up with a lot of squeezing, even though this is hard on older folks. It's easier on the taxes, you see.

Heard a tourism panel speaker from Calgary say that in Victoria we don't blow our own trumpets enough in order to attract and keep visitors. We should, I gather, act the Old Mariner and grab by the lapels every tourist who comes to town and pour our virtues into his ears. I get the idea all right, but if taken too literally the result might be disastrous; our visiting friends might turn and beat it for home. I fancy anyway that most of us are too shy for this kind of routine.

* * *

At the same meeting there was that eloquently dynamic chap John Fisher, one of the most adaptable platform men in all of Canada. If he can't sell tourism no one else will. As a matter of fact I thought he carried the whole panel on his shoulders, on this particular occasion at any rate, making up for somewhat inept remarks by others by admirable virtuosity on his part. He is a one-man team in himself.

In comparing the anthem habits of Canada and South Africa I did Royal Roads an injustice by conveying the impression that "God Save the Queen" had been replaced by "O Canada" at the college. This is not so. "O Canada" was played twice at the graduation ceremony as a military tune for the general salute. Only a prosaic circumstance prevented "The Queen" from concluding the afternoon's program—the Naden band had left to keep another engagement. At Royal Roads they are as loyal as they make them, both to their sovereign and to their country.

Picasso is a genius, as the article made clear, and I wouldn't doubt it for a moment. Only a genius could paint his little daughter and make her nose stick out of the side of her face instead of the front, put her eyes askew on different levels, and generally make his masterpiece grotesque. The painting has a "striking psychological impact," says the caption, and that it has. But if she struck her dad with a hammer when she grew up I don't see how even Picasso could have blamed the lass.

An interesting little book on flags reveals that only 33 of the 196 ships which defeated the Spanish Armada were Queen's ships; the rest were privately owned privateers in the form of what nowadays we would call armed merchant cruisers. Many of the famous admirals of those days were in effect "RNR," being originally master mariners and not naval careerists.

Even at this later date that may be counted one up for the merchant service, which in war never gets the credit that goes to the formal fighting forces of the nation. It might be said of the merchant seaman indeed what T. E. Lawrence said of the private soldier: that he'll never get his real due until he himself writes the dispatches.

And that I doubt he'll ever do.

International Commentary

Five Years of NATO Achievement

By JULES MENKEN, from London

WHEN Lord Ismay left Paris last month a vital chapter in the life of NATO closed. The five years of his service as secretary-general of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and vice-chairman of the North Atlantic Council have been crowded, creative, and fruitful.

When he took office in April, 1952, the Lisbon Conference had just outlined tasks for NATO which doubters regarded as impossible. But when he closed the door of his office in the Palais de Chaillot in Paris for the last time, what was essential in those tasks, after reappraisal and adjustment in many particulars, had in their main and most important core been largely accomplished.

* * *

To realize how much NATO had to do, and how much has been done, we must go back to the situation in the spring of 1952.

Stalin was then still alive and strong. The Korean War was dragging on amid embittered and endless negotiations. In Indo-China the Viet Minh — Communists masquerading as nationalists—were waging an increasingly successful guerrilla struggle. Germany was not yet a member of NATO, nor had Moscow yet marshalled its satellites in Eastern Europe into the Warsaw Pact.

Both the United States and the Soviet Union had atomic bombs, but the American hydrogen bomb still lay in the future, as did the Soviet one. Meanwhile Stalin was developing formidable conventional forces and was throwing large resources into a nuclear and guided missile effort with all the drive he normally put behind the build-up of armed strength.

NATO therefore faced a correspondingly formidable military task in preparing to deter Soviet aggression and to shield the West against it, and also a political task of great magnitude in evolving the practices of consultation and co-operation which the North Atlantic allies needed in order to counter the growing threat that confronted them.

* * *

The NATO achievement during these five years is remarkable—and is still largely unappreciated. On the military side the number of trained active divisions is significantly larger, while aircraft and ships are much more numerous and more modern. Great improvements in the training, command, and cohesion of these forces have given them much greater combat value even with conventional weapons alone. A further great increase in their fire-power results from the tactical atomic weapons now at their disposal.

And behind the NATO shield of ground and tactical air forces stands the immense deterrent threat of nuclear-strategic air retaliation which Soviet aggression against NATO member countries would evoke.

Another major development of these years has been the creation of a NATO system of airfields, fuel pipelines and communications without which modern armies, navies, and air forces cannot work. Today NATO disposes of about 170 airfields, of about 4,000 miles of fuel pipelines, and of fuel storage tanks with a combined capacity roughly equivalent to a lake three-quarters of a mile long, half a mile wide, and five feet deep.

In the communications field NATO is responsible for great advances which have also improved the civilian networks of certain member countries and have made them much more efficient than before. And in the difficult task of standardizing military equipment, arms and munitions, small but important gains have been made.

* * *

Of the very highest importance have been developments in the political field during the past five years. Outstanding here has been the admission of the German Federal Republic to NATO and the inclusion of the Federal Republic and of Italy in Western European Union, the new body which was created in 1954 by are agreements signed that autumn in Paris and which succeeded the Brussels Treaty Organization that was established in 1949.

Between Western European Union and NATO the closest co-operation in both civilian and military affairs was envisaged and has developed. By no means the least of the problems which both bodies have faced are those arising from the economic and financial necessities that are compelling Britain, within the framework of her treaty commitments, to reduce somewhat the forces which she contributes to the NATO shield on the Continent of Europe. Among other political developments of great importance has been the offer by Lord Ismay in March of his good offices for conciliation on the Cyprus dispute.

* * *

Senior officials of international organizations must observe the utmost discretion. The outside world therefore cannot judge exactly what role Lord Ismay has played in helping to shape and strengthen NATO during his five years as secretary-general. Those who had the privilege of meeting him and an opportunity to assess his qualities for themselves will have no doubt that his contribution has been large and most important. That the highest British authorities hold this opinion is evidenced by the decision to confer upon him membership in the supreme British Order of Chivalry, the Most Noble Order of the Garter.

Mr. Paul Henri Spaak, Lord Ismay's successor as secretary-general of NATO, has received another rare honor — the Charlemagne Prize awarded annually to the public figure considered to have done most for European unity. In Britain this fact has been noted among the many signs that show in what spirit and with what distinction the affairs of NATO will be guided during the years immediately ahead.

DR. Heinrich Bruening and his cabinet resigned in Berlin, 25 years ago. President Paul von Hindenburg conferred with Social Democrat leader Paul Loebe and Nazi leader Adolf Hitler.

The Nazis boasted: "Our hour has come." But they had not gained control of Germany yet. Meanwhile, there had been riots involving Nazis, Communists and unemployed.

Crowds cheered as the Dornier DO-X flying boat, largest heavier-than-air craft in the world, touched down in Berlin after a 16,000-mile, two-year global journey.

The third session of Canada's 17th parliament ended . . . British Columbia's attorney-general, R. H. Pooley, announced that the province would cut its liquor board from three men to one. The sole commissioner, W. F. Kennedy, was to be paid $9,000 a year.

H. B. Witter was re-elected to head the board of directors of Victoria YMCA. Roy Daniells, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Daniells of Victoria, was awarded a teaching fellowship at the University of Toronto. He was destined to become Dr. Daniells, head of the department of English at UBC.

Bruce Humber, former Victorian on the Roosevelt high school track team in Seattle, won the 220-yard event at Seattle's inter-high school games. He set a new inter-high record of [illegible] seconds.

POLYGAMY flourished in Victoria's Chinatown, Mrs. George Young, president of the Women's Missionary Society, charged 50 years ago in Winnipeg after a visit to the Pacific Coast.

Many of the wealthier Chinese had three or four wives and slave girls, she claimed.

Snow flurries fell on Ottawa on May 28, 1907. Temperatures were the lowest registered on that date for 25 years.

San Francisco mobs had attacked Japanese storekeepers and restaurant keepers. A restaurant and bath house had been demolished. An official investigation was under way, after protests from Tokyo.

Police were executing stray goats and pigs on the streets of Victoria. "Pop! Pop! Nearly every day, right under our Langley Street window, goes the revolver of an official butcher clad in a blue coat and shining brass buttons, as he speeds a messenger of death into the vitals of some luckless vagrant hog . . .

"Langley is the greatest place for sporting in the whole country. There are more hogs and goats destroyed in that neighborhood than in all the rest of the town put together."

"Some Italian fishermen have been casting seines for trout in Prospect Lake, and all amateur sportsmen hold up their hands in condemnation of this practice. The lake, we believe, is private property, and if the owners see fit to allow the fishermen to cast in their nets . . . we see no way to prevent it, the more especially as no law to reach the case is in existence here."

The Packsack

Of GREGORY CLARK

LET us Canadians not think that we are the only ones having trouble with the English language. The English themselves have plenty.

On the radio the other day a gentleman from the BBC was introducing some transcriptions of band music by the famous regimental bands of Britain. And he came to the place in his announcement where he had to refer to massed brass bands.

What he came out with was "messed brawss bends."

I felt terribly sorry for him, because the minute he said it, he knew he had not done it justice. You could tell by the way his voice quivered. "Massed brass bands" is a phrase to stump any of us. Imagine how a Scot would say it. Figure how a Lancashire man would handle all those a's. An Australian would get the "massed" very much as we Canadians do; but the "brass" would be ultra-Oxford. A Texan would say "ma-yussed bra-yuss bayands." A Bostonian of Irish descent wouldn't pronounce it at all, because it referred to British bands; and an educated Bostonian would bring the brass out as "bbarse."

There is no canon on the pronunciation of English; for the English themselves, who claim to have invented the language, have forty ways of pronouncing it. The English tongue is a conglomeration hardly equalled by any other language. And some conglomeration should result in its pronunciation. The Romans made England a colony for three centuries, which is much longer than the United States, for instance, has been a nation. In the church, the courts, and elsewhere they left their language in Britain centuries after they had fled the isles. The Latin word for palm — palm of the hand, palm tree — is "palma." Plain palma. You cannot get "pom" out of it. The Greek is "palamee." The dictionaries show all the a's to be as in "pam." But even the flattest Americans figure it the mark of elegance to call a palm tree a "pom."

And when we hear some poor fella talking about "messed brawss bends," let us figure he is just being local, and do our best not to feel lofty.

Where's Money Coming From?

I wonder just how many contractors were on the Chamber of Commerce university sub-committee that toured Victoria College the other day. There are several buildings (in fact a good deal of this city) that deserve to be condemned before Victoria College (e.g. most of "Chinatown"). I wonder if these gentlemen would be as quick to condemn them, there being no source of revenue like the government to rebuild them. Being, at present, a student there, I have heard no complaints of the buildings being in such bad shape; and as for the classrooms, while they are not as modern as some in Victoria, are still adequate—warm and reasonably well lighted for their purpose.

After all what else do you want in a classroom. It is the teachers that count most. Did one of the sub-committee suggest an increase in the far too little salary of the professors? The sub-committee also wants new buildings; nobody wants to see a university here more than I do, but let's use all we've got first. There are many times in the day when all classrooms at the college are not in use. As for the laboratories, isn't UBC supposed to be the "engineer's paradise."

I thought one of the purposes of a universiy here was to save overcrowding and duplication of services with UBC, besides being primarily an arts degree-granting university. One way to cut down expenses would be to cut down unnecessary compulsory courses (e.g. one year of a foreign language for an engineering student.)

As for the new building project at the College; undoubtedly we need a larger library, but as for a new gymnasium, that's the last thing we need—these students are supposed to be men now—let them look out for their own physical fitness; and those who are going in for physical education teachers (if they are needed) could be taught at UBC. As for a new cafeteria, is there a lack of private capital to build one? Surely this could be built privately and profitably and still charge reasonable prices, as many restaurants in the city do. Besides, the cafeteria we have now isn't that bad.

By the way, did any sub-committee members offer to contribute anything to the College; a contribution which I believe, since Victoria College is a part of UBC, would be equalled by the government? Undoubtedly there will be a need for new buildings when Victoria College becomes a university, but let us hope there will be better planners than are on the sub-committee. Just because other schools don't practice economy, that's no reason for Victoria College not too. A city university could be implemented a lot sooner if we had more economically-minded planners. Sure, new buildings would be nice, but where's the money coming from?

'Unbearably Arrogant'

The Liberals don't like super-nations but, oh how they do delight to think they are super-men and absolutely indispensable. If one placed any faith in their claims Canada will certainly go to the dogs if they are defeated at the forthcoming election.

Their stalwarts (the triumvirate of Uncle Louis, C. D. Howe and Paul Martin, especially) do not hesitate to claim a monopoly of the brainy men in parliament or out of it for that matter, and appear to think they should be installed in office in perpetuity.

Let me remind that that the citizens of the most powerful nation on earth today, the United States of America, approved the amendment of their country's constitution, recently, debarring any citizen from holding the office of president for more than two terms. It was not considered in the best interests of the nation for any man to hold office for a longer period, no matter how successful or popular he may have been during his incumbency.

In any case the late Liberal government had become unbearably arrogant, and no longer the servants of the people. There are lots of other reasons why "it is time for a change," and it is to be hoped that the voters will carefully consider what the Tories have to offer before casting their ballots on June 10.

Of one thing they may be sure, John Diefenbaker will make a prime miniser that Canada as a whole will be proud of, if his party receives a mandate from the people to form a government.

Now It's the Fountain

In all the furore and shouting about what is to be done with the Fountain Circle, I have seen no mention of the fountain itself. Am I the only one in this city who thinks it tasteless and hideous, and completely out of proportion to the area it stands in? Plonk and here it sits, like an old-fashioned egg-cup in the middle of an oversize dinner plate.

Why not a wide, low bowl-shaped fountain with the water issuing from a sculptured group of our deep-sea denizens? Or, if that is too much to ask, a statute of Capt. Vancouver. Should these be beyond the artistic or financial resources of the city, let us settle for a pleasing arrangement of shrubs and flowers.

In any event, let us hastily sweep the present fountain out of sight. The tourists are coming, and they judge us by these things.

Appeal by Postcards

Would you kindly allow me space to correct a misinterpretation of my remarks at the last Duncan-Cowichan Chamber of Commerce meeting.

I told members that one of the best and cheapest ways of advertising a city was by the use of the colored postcard. In previous years in Victoria Coast Publishers of Vancouver had informed me that there were approximately 1,000,000 cards (not dollars worth) sold in Victoria every year.

As Duncan had so little to offer in the way of scenic view cards, my suggestion was to sponsor a competition with the winning shots being used as material for colored cards. I further suggested that in order to make it worthwhile for publishers to manufacture these cards, that service clubs and tourist resorts in Duncan purchase them in volume (at one cent each), and send them to their friends or give them away to visitors.

There was never any mention of Victoria cards selling for a penny.

Ignoring Public Wishes

Your editorial "Too Dragged Out" in today's Colonist has surely missed out on the major cause of the apathy on the part of the electors, namely the uselessness of voting when the result of the vote may be ignored or overruled by order in council; or if the powers that be do not like the will of the people then they set about calling another election and propagandizing the voter into the desired frame of mind. Can you blame the public for getting fed up with politics and politicians?

CBC Delays New Station

Further action on establishment of CFAX, proposed "good music" radio station in Saanich, is unlikely until early in the fall, it was learned yesterday.

Ellison Queale, president of Saanich Broadcasting Company, said he has been advised that the CBC has yet to complete its study of existing program standards in this and other metropolitan areas.

Mr. Queale said CFAX will probably come before the CBC board of governors in late August or September and "if we are granted a licence at that time, we will be on the air by Christmas."

Mr. Queale said there may be some construction difficulties if the licence is granted later than September, as the transmitter site is flooded during the winter.

Bingo Tax Disputed

Club Seeks Way Out

Victoria Kinsmen may send a letter of information to provincial tax authorities in an effort to salvage profits that the government claims are marked as amusement tax [illegible]e.

The 200 club members and volunteers who help to run the bingo games in Victoria plan to discuss the problem today after preparing the arena for the mammoth match Monday night, the sixth staged here by the Kinsmen.

Bingo committee chairman Jack Philion termed the broadened regulations "a little odd" when the club could get off tax-free if prizes were donated by businesses, but the amusement tax is imposed if the club has to purchase its prizes, adding to the burden.

Kinsmen, he said, have adopted the argument that patrons of the game entertain themselves and are not entertained by the operators.

Almost all of the 5,000 advance sale tickets for Monday's game have been sold. But an additional 2,000 tickets will go on sale at the arena box office Monday prior to the match.

Assisting the Kinsmen Monday will be members of the [illegible] of De Molay, Kinsmen Air Cadets, Girls' Ice Hockey Team, Kinettes, K-40 Club and Sidney and Vic Van Isle Kinsmen clubs.

Shutter VIEWS

By Drew Waterworth

In case your photography habits carry you along in a comfortable rut without much regard for new products and developments, let's have a quick look at a couple of fast films which may have escaped your attention.

First is Ilford's H.P.5, perhaps the fastest black-and-white roll film you can hope to use. This film lends itself admirably in conditions of low light levels where getting the picture and stopping the action without benefit of auxiliary light might ordinarily pose a problem.

Color enthusiasts too can take a whirl at using extremely fast film with Super Anscochrome which boasts a daylight exposure index of 160. This film should take a long step toward eliminating long exposures, slow emulsions, and other handicaps which have bothered some photographers under less-than-ideal light conditions.

Speaking of handicaps, if you're struggling along with a camera which doesn't allow you the versatility you prefer, how about a look at the De Jur 35 mm. camera at JUB-RITE PHOTOS LTD., 716 Yates St.? At only $78.95, including telephoto and wide angle lenses and eveready leather case, this is the slickest, most eye-popping performer available. See it today at JUB-RITE PHOTOS LTD. Phone 4-1552.

A low, low car is the Lotus, a streamlined, lightweight projectile capable of more than 130 miles an hour.

The Car Corner

Little Giant-Killers

By J. T. JONES

The Lotus car, by its name and size, might well be stamped "Made in Japan"—but in fact it is built in London by Londoners, and very clever Londoners, too.

The ingenious genius behind the Lotus is a young engineer named Colin Chapman, who shows all the marks of following in the giant footsteps of Ettore Bugatti, Ferdinand Porsche and Enzo Ferrari.

His cars, strictly racing types so far, have very little tendency to follow in anybody's footsteps. They belong to the giant-killing breed that takes on cars with engines twice as big and more, and makes them sweat and strain to keep up.

* * *

At Abbotsford last weekend there were two of the late-model Mark XI Lotuses up from Washington State for a day's dicing. One of them (1,100 cc.) blew himself up trying to get past a Mercedes 300SL (3,000 cc.). Heaven knows what kind of revs was he he was imposing on the tiny Coventry Climax engine when it popped. He seemed to have forgotten about top gear altogether.

Essentially a Lotus Mark XI is a low, streamlined, aluminum shell surrounding a rigid framework of small tubing, a 1,100-cc. or 1,500-cc. Climax engine (with one or two overhead camshafts and 75 to 140 horsepower and independent suspension all round, depending on how much money you pay).

The driver sits on the small of his back, the top of his head about 36 inches from the ground.

All Lotuses are lightweights. With fuel, oil, water and driver aboard, a Mark XI weighs in about 1,360 pounds. With the 83-horsepower engine, it can get to 100 miles an hour from a standstill in 22 seconds.

While Lotuses in the past have shown some fragility when up against such hot and rugged competitors as Porsche Spyders, the rest of the field always has to be on the lookout if there's a Lotus around.

* * *

A famed West Coast car ran at Abbotsford last week — Pete Lovely's Porsche-Cooper, better known as the Pooper, from Seattle. He took the under-1,500 modified class by about two feet after a rousing battle with a Porsche, and in the main event, every man for himself, he lapped the whole field, including a Mercedes 300SL.

With one lap to go, he had to pull in with a cramped leg, to hand the car over to another driver, waving off the pit crew with its gasoline and oil cans.

The new man took the car about a third of the way around the last lap, still with a comfortable lead, and then ran out of fuel.

Lovely thought that was a huge joke on him, blowing the race that way. A spectator who also thought it was funny was Grant King of Victoria, who has watched his car lose at Western Speedway for the same reason.

* * *

Also noted at Abbotsford: a tiny Porsche coupe with a sticker in the rear window—"Help Stamp Out CADILLACS." And a fuel injection Corvette that moved through a pack of competitors like a Jaguar through a herd of Morrises.

Hungarian Describes . . . . . Russian Looting

They Drowned in Wine

By G. E. MORTIMORE

The story of a group of Russian soldiers who drowned themselves in wine is told by a one-time Hungarian gentleman farmer now staying in Victoria.

Nicholas Borhy, 62, owner of a big estate which had been in his family for generations, kept thousands of gallons of wine in a long tunnel carved through the sandstone.

When the Russians reached his estate they burst into his wine-tunnel, broached barrels and began drinking. In fits of drunken rage, they shot holes in the barrels and finally slumped on the floor in a stupor.

A number of the revellers stayed there unconscious, and drowned in the tide of wine.

Mr. Borhy's estate was an experimental farm, and the owner himself took a leading part in the development of new strains of food-plants. When the Communists came in, they cut down and ate corn and other plants bearing seeds that had taken 20 years to develop.

Stripped of his property, Mr. Borhy lived from the proceeds of jewelry which he had managed to conceal.

He joined the Hungarian anti-Communist revolution, helped destroy a Russian tank with gasoline bombs, and was wounded in the leg in Budapest, last November.

He escaped from Russian custody when his jailers became drunk on alcohol from a looted pharmacy.

He made his way to Victoria, stayed for a time with Mr. and Mrs. K. W. Symons of St. Michael's school, and is at present the guest of Mrs. George Hunt, 3225 Uplands Road.

Mr. Borhy believes that the United States should have launched a preventive war against Russia five years ago, before the Soviet Union built up its strength for an attack on the west, which he feels to be inevitable.

"The Russians are training 100,000 officers each year, all fanatics, high priests of Communism," he says.

Centennial Idea

Famous Discovery May Sail Again

Construction of a replica of Capt. George Vancouver's famous ship, the Discovery, as part of a giant historical pageant in Victoria next year, is being considered by the tourist trade group of the Chamber of Commerce.

Pictures and information about the wooden vessel have been given the tourist group by Capt. George Gregory of the Thermopylae Club.

The tourist trade group decided to appoint a committee to study the project.

Sam Lane, chairman of the group, said it might be possible to build the vessel through public subscription, the method used to finance the replica of the Mayflower which is now on its way to the United States.

The ship would be sailed around the coast and used in connection with the centennial pageant. Local theatre groups might like to work with the chamber in producing the historical pageant, Mr. Lane said.

HAVE RIGHT GEAR

Chimpanzees have the necessary vocal equipment for speech but all attempts to teach them to talk have failed.

Harry Young's . . . . . Business Topics

Competition Keener Than Ever

Automobile executives, normally fairly garrulous fellows, close up like clams when asked about their next year's models.

Surprise is their one chief method of getting a jump on the other fellow, and one is rather afraid that it is fear of being left behind that causes so many of the more outrageously unusual styles that have been inflicted on the public in recent years.

For 1958, the advance line of thought is that the competition will be keener than ever among the three major American producers.

Ford, which in the U.S. is outselling Chevrolet at the moment, is introducing its new Edsel line, and General Motors, with a jubilee to celebrate, is threatening to make the Chevvy hotter than ever. Buick and Oldsmobile, which have been slipping recently, are said to be in for a full re-styling.

Chrysler which brought its costly "forward look" into effect in 1956 and 1957, is claiming to have the 1960 car in advance, but Chrysler too will probably have some innovations in 1958 to catch their share of the market.

When he was in Victoria last week, R. W. Todgham, president of Chrysler of Canada, expressed the view that the car buyer of the next year or so might be more interested in extras than in any particular design.

There are lots of luxury gimmicks which can be fitted to make even the lowest priced basic car a luxury or semi-luxury outfit.

Mr. Todgham also expressed the view that cars would not become any longer, and indeed that they might go the other way.

With parking problems everywhere, this is a move that will be received happily by a wide cross section of the public, from municipalities to the individual home garage-owner.

However, perhaps the most interesting automobile happening of the past week was the talk given by Rhys M. Sale, president of Ford of Canada, to a meeting of medical men in Toronto.

Mr. Sale said Ford was fully behind the Medical Association's plan to establish a Canadian Medical Traffic Accident Research Foundation.

Deploring the fact that total deaths from traffic accidents ranked third as a killer only to heart disease and cancer, Mr. Sale said the new research foundation could help stay the awful carnage.

He noted that in Britain, where they have a Royal Society for the Prevention of Accidents, road deaths since before the war have dropped by 27 per cent. In Canada and the United States they have gone up.

Obviously there's a job for the research foundation to find out why. Is it because the U.S. cars are too big and powerful? Or are driving habits better in the United Kingdom?

Mr. Sale quotes a Cornell University report that if all the present known safety devices were installed on the 60,000,000 vehicles on the roads today, casualties would be cut one third.

But the Ford chief does not blame high-powered cars for the rising accident rate. He reckons the human element is the No. 1 killer, and that the foundation should get the modest funds it requires — about $150,000 a year — to pursue its investigations into every accident in every province of Canada.

University—and Fast

By 1960, the flock of war babies will be reaching the university entrance level.

Humphrey Golby, Victoria school trustee, believes that this will impose a severe strain on the present accommodation at Victoria College, even if the present expansion planned by the college council receives immediate acceptance by the government.

The need for speed, not only to bring the college up to a four-year course level, with full university standing, but even to hold what it has, is apparent to all those interested in higher education in the district.

At the moment it is offering courses of various types to about 1,600 students. Of these, 575 are taking university or education courses, another 400 are enrolled for the summer session, and the evening division enrollment is between 600 and 700, of which about 80 are taking credit courses.

Prof. Robert Wallace believes that allowing for duplication of courses being taken, the college is providing educational facilities for about 1,500 persons a year.

This total will probably increase up to 30 per cent in the next few years.

While not all those participating are taking credit courses, it is nonetheless interesting that the Victoria College figures are not far short of what the experts believe could be a good foundation number for the start of a full liberal arts college offering a four-year course.

This is the move that is being pressed by many leading Victoria business men and is at the moment spearheaded by the university committee of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

Educationalists believe that if Victoria gets its university, either as an affiliate of UBC or some other university, that between 2,000 and 3,000 students should be the target.

One of the present difficulties in the establishment of this aim is the situation at UBC, where expansion is also urgently required.

One UBC spokesman at last week's meeting with the Chamber of Commerce committee said that Victoria College could expect nothing from Point Grey until the UBC apple had been completely polished.

While that was probably an exaggeration it is also true that unless the Victoria public stresses its desire for status as a university city, the government will be encouraged to let things remain as they are, and have been for the past 50 years.

What many people forget in the argument about Victoria College is that the local hall of learning has for many years provided UBC with its most distinguished students. Indeed, many parents not resident on Vancouver Island have preferred to send their offspring to the college rather than to UBC for their starter courses.

The success of Victoria College students has been largely due to the high calibre of the professors and the teaching staff. Never has the quality been higher than at present, and it is safe to say that the addition of the two extra years of courses, at present being sought, would in no way be jeopardized by lack of teaching ability.

Dollar Tempts Investors

Many investors are tempted, because of the high value on the Canadian dollar, to buy U.S. securities, or even convert cash into U.S. funds.

There is some attraction in being able to buy stocks on the New York Stock Exchange at about five per cent discount on the market price, although investors have to remember that when dividends are paid, the Canadian dollar works the other way, and that the income tax credit of 20 per cent is not available on foreign securities.

The main attraction of U.S., or even British and European purchases at the present time, is the possibility of a weakening in the value of the Canadian dollar.

Now at its highest point in more than 24 years, the Canadian dollar rides on the crest of the wave despite the fact that the balance of trade with the U.S. was an adverse one of more than $1,650,000,000 in 1956.

If no other influences counted, the Canadian dollar would quickly slip to a discount position.

It is not doing so, because the flow of U.S. capital into Canadian enterprises continues to be higher than the adverse balance of trade.

This keeps the demand for the Canadian dollar higher than that for the U.S. dollar.

At the moment there is no sign that foreign investment is on the wane. Indeed, the trend is the reverse, and it is doubtful if even a Progressive Conservative success at the polls would create any serious barrier to the importation of outside capital into Canadian enterprises.

It would appear at present as if the chances of a decline in Canadian funds are not likely to be of a wide enough nature to offset the taxation benefits arising from investment in home equities.

They may also miss the opportunity of the many interesting growth situations which have developed in Canada over the past 10 years, and look like continuing to do for many years to come.

SUPPORTS B.C. FIRMS

New York Life Insurance Company reports that at the end of 1956 it had nearly $100,000,000 invested in Canadian securities.

Although it holds no provincial or municipal securities of British Columbia, it has supported strongly the leading corporations in the province.

Its largest individual holding is $9,036,000 in mortgage bonds of Westcoast Transmission, while it also holds $5,900,000 mortgage bonds of Trans-Mountain Pipeline. It is also a big holder of Aluminum Company of Canada debentures, B.C. Electric mortgage bonds, and B.C. Telephone mortgage bonds.

Building Spurts After Slump In Nanaimo

NANAIMO — Permits for housing construction in Nanaimo are down by about 50 per cent over last year, said building inspector Ben Boers Friday, but they are "picking up all the time."

Mr. Boers said total building figures are higher than last year, but they are dropping.

Figures for May show a drop of $74,385 over 1956. Forty-seven permits worth $163,465 were taken out as against 55 permits worth $237,850 in May 1956. The year's total is $1,848,612 for 175 permits. Last year, up to the end of May, 218 permits totalled $1,668,915.

Permits for eight new dwellings last month boosted the month's figures by $82,500.

Alberni Sea Cadet Corps edged out four other Vancouver Island cadet groups at HMCS Naden yesterday in the annual inter-corps sports competitions.

Port Alberni cadets won the aggregate plaque with a total of 16 points. Mainguy corps of Duncan garnered 13 points. Amphion of Nanaimo won 12. Victoria's Rainbow cadets took 11 and DeWolf of Campbell River was awarded seven points.

Main events of the competition included a whaler race, rifle team contest, tug o' war, and track and field meet.

Following the sports events, the Naden swimming pool was opened to the cadets. They were entertained in the evening by a special stage show.

Following a church parade at Metropolitan and St. Andrew's Cathedral today, there will be a march-past at a saluting base set up at Victoria Public Library.

Life Aboard A Cold Water Pipe

By VIRGINIA SHIRLEY

SALT SPRING ISLAND—Birds in the Gulf Islands have become transportation conscious. A pair of enterprising swallows are raising a family of ferry users out Salt Spring Island way.

Passengers, travelling on the Gulf Islands Ferry Company's "Motor Princess," which plies the waters between Fulford Harbor and Swartz Bay, are watching with interest as the birds dart back and forth from the nest, which is securely fastened above a cold water pipe over the car deck.

The parent birds seize the opportunity to pick up meals while the ferry is in the slip at Fulford, and at Swartz Bay the performance is repeated while the cars move off and on. Between meal snacks are collected en route.

Travellers are wondering what the young birds will think of the housing arrangements when they start learning to fly. Meanwhile, the crew is keeping a kindly eye out for their safety.

I Know What I Like

By Tony Emery

'I Take Off My Pistol's Safety Catch'

A popular playwright of the Nazi movement put these words into the mouth of one of his characters, a thug of the Horst Wessel type: "When I hear the word culture I take off the safety catch of my pistol." The words are remembered frequently, but the playwright is so far forgotten that his lines are usually attributed to Hermann Goering, who once quoted them with complacent approval.

It would be difficult to find anyone in Canada today who would subscribe to such hysterically extreme expressions of anti-intellectual bias, but apathy and muddled thinking in respect of the arts are commonly encountered. When the apathy and confusion are manifested by the ordinary citizen I am not unduly disturbed; the man-in-the-street has seldom evinced any genuine interest in the arts since the Industrial Revolution removed him from the plough and his flocks and handed him a spanner or a lathe.

It is the apathy of the politicoes at present contending for our votes that fills me with the greatest gloom. What guarantee have we that if we elect the Big Endians they will cultivate our artistic garden? If the Little Endians are returned, will matters be better, or worse? And what of the Erewhonians, who speak of doing away with the CBC and gibe at the Canada Council?

The word "culture" is tossed back and forth by the demagogues, but little thought is given to what it means. If a few flat and bumptious assertions by me here will serve to clear the ground for argument, it would be churlish of me to keep mum, so here goes.

Culture, I take it, has at least two aspects. First, it is "the training and refinement of mind, taste and manners; the intellectual side of civilization." G.B. Shaw and Matthew Arnold so succinctly said: "It is the acquainting ourselves with the best that has been known and said in the world."

Secondly, it is the sum of all the works of art in every medium produced by a particular nation or civilization at a particular time, and of the feelings towards those works expressed by those nations themselves.

It is other things as well, but these two aspects will do for a start. Let us take the first point, that of "training and refining the mind, taste and manners." Since this process clearly presumes the existence of competent trainers, we might with profit pause to consider what we are doing to provide them. Do you believe that the schooling we give our youngsters trains and refines their minds, tastes and manners to the highest possible degree? And what of the all-important home influence?

Every Canadian is born heir to two great cultures: properly schooled, our children, equally at home in French and English, might roam at will in two of the greatest literatures the world has yet seen. A combination of Gallic logic with British common sense, French savoir vivre with British sangfroid, British government and justice with French wine and cooking—what a heritage! Only the Swiss, with three cultures to draw on, could boast anything to equal it.

At present, however, this can only be a dream. While educational experts (save the mark) are "experimenting" to see if Canadian public school children are capable of doing something that Canadian private school children (and all other children in the world) can do with ease—viz., learn foreign languages from the age of 10—American jukebox culture is capturing every child's attention and admiration.

These "experts," and every Canadian parent should stand up every morning, face the flag, and repeat solemnly: "O Canada, it has been demonstrated that our public school children are second in physical flabbiness only to those of the great sodapop and candybar civilization to the south."

It might at the same time occur to those taking part in this simple but moving ceremony that what has happened to the bodies of our children may also be happening to their minds as well. What are we doing to stop it?

TV Preview

Programs Run Gamut, Khrushchev to Lewis

Just a few of the other people involved in the big ones are Prince Philip, some leading golfers, Marian Anderson, Wally Cox, Fred Astaire and Polly Bergen.

Two shows tomorrow deserve special mention. On channel 6 Keith MacKenzie will chair a discussion of hockey's future in Victoria; on channel 4, Bloomgarden and Snodgrass go again at $3,500 a point on the 21 quiz, but because of the mixup last time, Bloomgarden is assured of no less than $52,500.

* * *

Doing it day by day, today's highlights are Nikita Khrushchev on Face the Nation, the Palm Beach golf final, Prince Philip's speech (twice), channel 6 with local church choirs and Earl Browder with Mike Wallace. For details, see TV Talk today.

Tomorrow, Marian Anderson on Master Musicians, the hockey show and 21 (details below); Wednesday, Little Bullfighter on U.S. Steel Hour (channels 11 and 12, 7 p.m.), Wally Cox in The Roaring 20th on Kraft Theatre; Thursday, Playhouse 90 shows Without Incident with Errol Flynn, Julie London, John Ireland (channel 11, 9.30 p.m.).

* * *

They are Seventh Veil and Long Voyage Home today, The Star tomorrow, House on 92nd Street Tuesday, Kidnapped Wednesday, Gilbert and Sullivan, Drums, and Sahara Thursday, Fuller Brush Man and the new oldie Barclays of Broadway, with Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, Friday.

Conventions Falling Off

Only 1,250 convention delegates will be coming to Victoria during June, as compared to several thousand during the big convention month of May.

The Telephone Association of Canada convention will be held from Monday to Friday with 125 persons attending. Some 500 delegates will attend the Canadian Library Association meetings from June 12 to 15. The Asphalt Institute will meet June 17 to 19 with 125 attending, and the Gyro International will meet from June 25 to 29 with 500 delegates.

Civil Defence May Form Air Group

Formation of a civilian air group to co-operate with civil defence officials in emergencies has been recommended to federal civil defence authorities in Ottawa.

A similar group, the Civil Air Patrol, has been in operation in the United States for some time.

Joe Howroyd, 1710 Mortimer, a member of Victoria Flying Club, attended the Ottawa meeting as a delegate from B.C.

Hurt in Church

Ann Appleby, aged 10, of 3134 Balfour, is in good condition at Royal Jubilee Hospital, where she was admitted Thursday suffering a severe cut on the arm.

She sustained the injury while hurrying through some swinging doors at Centennial United Church, where she was attending choir practice. Accidentally, she pushed her hand through the glass.

ROBERT STROM

Recording Released At Last

The last recital of a brilliant young Rumanian pianist who died late in 1950 finally is available to the public, on Angel album 3556-B.

The recital is by Dinu Lipatti, who died at the age of 33 years in Geneva less than two months later. It was a broadcast on Radiodiffusion Francaise from the Besancon festival, and for some time was withheld by Lipatti's wife.

Lipatti, whose godfather was Georges Enesco, was a quiet lad with many good friends. Alfred Cortot resigned as a judge when Lipatti placed second in a competition, and in the last six years of Lipatti's life, when he needed expensive cortisone to fight TB, Charles Munch, Yehudi Menuhin and others paid the bills.

He plays a Bach partita, Mozart sonata, two Schubert impromptus and 13 of the 14 Chopin waltzes (he became too ill to play the last). The album cover says, rightly, that "the particularly touching nature of this recording can leave no one unmoved."

Henry Stubbings reports that the Recorded Music Society will present the Lipatti album when it resumes its regular programs in the Art Gallery in September.

Winged Wonder

Prop-Wash Tommy's Last Ride

A blue pigeon with white wings, Tommy amazed everyone at Hattiesburg Municipal airport by meeting incoming planes on the runway and riding on a wing or the tail as they taxied in. He perched on departing planes until the aircraft's gathering speed forced him off.

"Yesterday, Tommy got a little too brave or something" an airline spokesman said today. "He flew into a propeller, just as our Flight 315 was turning off the runway."

NEW YORK (NANA)—What will become of small Robert Strom, the scientific prodigy whose last televised words, uttered after his father had called off the pursuit of quiz money, were, "What can you do with parents?"

For the next three years, the Bronx public school student will have an annual "salary" of $64,000, representing his winnings on CBS' $64,000 Question TV quiz program.

Robert's earnings might have gone much higher if his father hadn't ruled that this was enough for a 10-year-old, even one who knows such diverse facts as the locations of all constellations, the results of most chemical reactions, and all about electronics.

But what about all those years ahead for Robert?

A fascinating clue to the answer is provided by young Strom's intellectual forerunners—the first kids to show massive minds to a mass audience.

Nearly a generation has passed since radio's original Quiz Kids, all, like Strom, in the genius category, began amazing and delighting their elders in broadcasts from Chicago in 1940. There were some dire predictions that all would grow up neurotic and maladjusted—just too smart for their environment.

But a Quiz Kid hunt has abolished such fears—as well as the contrary expectations that a child genius must grow up to become a titan of the arts or a captain of industry.

In the main, the original Quiz Kids are well and happy, if not spectacularly successful.

Joel Kupperman, the mathematics expert on the program, got his master's degree at the University of Chicago, finishing five years' work in three. He's now in England at King's College, Cambridge, working on his doctorate in philosophy and mathematics. When he returns he'll teach philosophy at a university. He has told his mother he'd "rather forget" his quiz kid eminence, that he wants to make a new name for himself on his "real merits."

Dick Williams, whose forte on the program was mathematics, geography and history, now has degrees from three universities and works for the state department. At Purdue University, where he studied mechanical engineering, he was managing editor of the paper and a member of the student-faculty board.

Vanessa Brown, the little girl who knew all the theatre answers, has become a glamorous TV and stage star. She was a child actress in "Watch on the Rhine" and was signed to a long movie contract while still a coed at UCLA. Now married to a doctor, she lives in Los Angeles.

Joan Bishop also was hep on theatre subjects, and now she is a singer and pianist. She has sung with leading opera companies, starred in a Broadway musical and appeared on a long list of radio and TV shows.

Cynthia Cline, the little whiz who always had her hand up on the literature questions, has become a contended housewife in Rochester, N.Y. She's the mother of three children and the wife of a research chemist. Cynthia, who was considered one of the most gifted children on the program, was a Phi Beta Kappa at Northwestern, where she got her master's degree.

Jack Lucal became a star debater at Georgetown University, where he majored in history and languages, of which he now speaks eight. He was with the army in Germany, and later abandoned his plans for a foreign service career to study for the priesthood as a Jesuit. At present he is doing missionary work in Ethiopia.

VANESSA BROWN

Ruth Duskin, who specialized in Aesop's fables and Shakespeare, was a Phi Beta Kappa at Northwestern University with a phenomenal scholastic record. She also won an award for outstanding work in musical composition. Now she's married to a Chicago lawyer.

Lonny Lunde's hand flew up at the music questions; now he is an accomplished singer, composer and song writer. He's also a guest conductor with symphony orchestras.

Gold in Them Thar Yups

Gary Cooper was late for his cha cha cha lesson when we called on him the other day. "My wife and daughter thought I ought to take 'em out dancing a little more often, so they signed me up for the course," he said with a shy smile.

He hoisted his expensively-shod feet up on the desk and rocked back in his chair, thumbs in belt loops. (He's a belt and suspenders man.)

"To what do I think I owe my success?" he mused aloud. "Why do I eat so much or talk so much? It's all the same thing. I really don't know.

"Maybe it's because once in a while I fling a good picture the happy combination of director and actors — which gives me a fresh start. Mostly I think it's because I look like the guy down the street."

Of all the actors interviewed for this series, fifty-six-year-old Coop, as he is known throughout the world, was the only one who claimed any resemblance to the guy next door. He says the "everyday look" is the secret that has kept him one of the top-box-office draws for thirty-two years.

In 1940 he drew the largest salary paid to anyone in the United States, the first time a movie star pulled down the nation's heaviest income.

As star of more than 70 films which grossed almost $200 million he is called "box office" by Variety, the trade paper of the entertainment field.

His income has not fallen below $500,000 for more than a decade. Recently he signed with CBS to host a series of TV films to be made by his own company.

We asked about the CBS deal. "I just don't know about it," he said. "I'd have to look at the contract. Got it right here in my brief case."

He opened an expensive brief case. Cautiously he reached in and extracted some gum, a few Italian lira, some pills, an old cigaret lighter, a pair of cuff links, and a French thousand franc note, but no TV contract.

"I give up," said Coop. "You'll have to wait for the answer. I'll find it some other time."

The contents of the brief case, however, told their own story of picture making all over the globe. His latest film is "Love in the Afternoon," made in England with Audrey Hepburn as his co-star.

Coop's rise as a film star is due to many things. Mainly, it's when people see him on screen they like and believe him. For all his seeming shyness, he's a shrewd judge of what's good for himself.

He started in silent films in 1927 at $125 a week plus $25 for falls from horses. Fresh from Montana, he figured if Tom Mix could make $15,000 a week riding horses and playing cowboy so could he.

After making an average of seven or eight pictures a year for a few years—with very little raise in salary—he became ill and quit movies to avoid becoming even sicker.

After making an average in Africa, he returned to Hollywood and a contract calling for $4,000 a week with choice of director and story and a guarantee of no more than two pictures a year.

The elements of that first contract have remained in all of his subsequent contracts. And he has never forgotten that he got his start in Westerns.

"All through my career I've always come up with a certain number of Westerns because people like them and I'm well-suited for them. I don't want to be tagged a Western star, but I've never wanted to lose the flavor.

One reason I've lasted a long time and better actors have fallen by the wayside is they talked too much in films. I look for action rather than talks.

"And I recognize my limitations. For instance, I never tried Shakespeare." Coop paused and grinned. "That's because I'd look funny in tights.

"I try to change as much as possible without getting miscast. An actor has to take the lead in his career. You try something and rely on your own judgment. Sometimes, I've fallen on my fanny, but at least I tried."

Off screen Coop is also homespun. He hunts and fishes whenever, and wherever he has time off. With the exception of an ulcer, he's in the pink of condition. His stance is soldier straight; he's flat hipped and slim.

Although his movie travels have taken him several times around the world, he's a passionate American.

According to legend, Coop is a "yup" man. "Fans even stop me on the street and ask me to please say 'yup' for them," he said.

"I suppose the story of my being a non-talker started 14 years ago, when I did a guest appearance on the Edgar Bergen-Charlie McCarthy show."

"The script called for me to say nothing but 'yup.' I sounded so natural saying that one word I guess people thought it was natural for me, so I've been saying it ever since.

"Yup is a convenient word, and I've learned people don't expect too much from a man with a one-word vocabulary. And, now I think of it, it's come in handy because when people ask me personal questions they don't expect an answer."

The record shows he has never refused to work with a director, a leading lady or a camera man, has never complained about billing and never asked for special favors, which makes him a rarity among top stars.

Producer Jerry Wald recalls the day Coop came up to him after completing a picture and said, "Thanks very much." "For what?" asked Wald. "For a good picture," said Coop.

"I never had an actor do that before," Wald told us. "Thanks is the world's cheapest commodity, but in Hollywood it's mighty rare. About as rare as Cooper."

The Banana Boat Is Sinking

By JIM TAYLOR

The banana boat is sinking slowly in the west, taking the rest of the calypso music with it.

Variety reports that after a deluge of calypso sides released since the start of the year, the output of Trinidad music has come to a virtual halt. In January there were 20 or 30 released each week. Now, there are only a couple of stragglers.

When Harry Belafonte began to click with such synthetic calypso numbers are "Jamaica Farewell" and "Day-O," Tin Pan Alley turned out carbon copies by the dozen in order to get in on the ground floor in what looked like a full-scale craze. Now, the bottom has dropped out.

Which leaves the field clear for rock 'n' roll. We always thought that the popular, heavy-beat music would go the way of all crazes, but when it lasts three years, it's more than just a fad.

It passed its biggest test when it withstood calypso, the teen-agers have voted and the sideburns have it.

Speaking of rock 'n' roll, remember when Elvis Presley was a singing style in himself? Consider how many Presleys we have now. Such as Charlie Gracie, Conrad Twitty, Gene Vincent, Eddie Cochrane and Johnny Dee, to name just a few . . . Harry Belafonte is due in Vancouver July 11 . . . Jimmy Dorsey, currently making a comeback in the pop record field, is seriously ill in New York . . . Whatever happened to Tab Hunter? . . . The Glenn Miller orchestra, under the direction of Ray McKinley, has signed to record for RCA Victor, the old Miller label.

NEW RELEASES: Jerry Lewis has perhaps the best of his Jolson imitations in his latest release, "My Mammy." It should be bigger than "Rockabye Your Baby" . . . Mindy Carson may succeed where the Jordanaires failed in making a hit out of "Sugaree," new on Columbia . . . Johnny Mathis has one that's just beginning to break here, although it's in the top 10 down east. It's called "It's Not For Me to Say" . . . Mickey and Sylvia have a new LP, "The New Sound" out now that contains some good sides, especially "Where Is My Honey?" . . . Latest for the Four Aces is "Three Sheets in the Wind."

JERRY LEWIS

ENGLISH CLICK: Already a smash hit in Britain, Russ Hamilton's version of the off-beat "Rainbow" is tabbed by the experts to go all the way to the top . . . Nat Cole has a solid commercial bet in "Send For Me," written by one of the Cues . . . Ferlin Husky has followed "Gone" with "A Fallen Star," which is also done by newcomer Jimmy Newman . . . Best bet of all the new releases of the week is a tremendous version of "Rockin' Shoes" by the Ames Brothers . . . and finally, all you Little Richard fans can buy tickets for his June 10 show at Ward's Music. They have 1,000. They can also be bought at the door . . . $1.75 a head.

Rossellini To Stay

NEW DELHI (AP) — Italian film director Roberto Rossellini has been given a three-month visa extension beginning May 1, a home ministry spokesman says.

His visa expired at the end of April and his case was reviewed because of reports of a romance with Indian beauty Sonali Das Gupta.

Home ministry sources said the Italian embassy in New Delhi has given a sort of surety that Rossellini will keep away from Sonali.

The biggest school musical group in this area, the Greater Victoria schools orchestra, will play in Beacon Hill Park at 3 p.m. today. Mrs. Dorothy Evans, the regular conductor, will lead the group in a pleasant program of music by Tschaikovsky, Frank Loesser and Mozart, and waltzes and folk songs.

It will be the second in a series of five Sunday afternoon programs in the park by school musical organizations.

UBC summer school of opera will present two short, powerful operas in August as its major production. Students will perform in The Medium, by Gian-Carlo Menotti, and in Gianni Schicchi, by Giacomo Puccini. "A Queen Is Crowned"
Foreword by Christopher Fry
Spoken by Sir Laurence Olivier
It is a privilege to again present this glorious film of pageantry and tradition to our patrons, for many reasons. First, it is a marvelous historical document, portrayed in all its intimacy and detail in beautiful Technicolor. The clarity of the photography makes you feel that you are actually in attendance on this memorable occasion. Secondly, it commemorates the fourth anniversary of the Coronation itself and the fifth year of Her Majesty's reign. Thirdly, it will enable many to relive again their own trip overseas and will also enable many children, who were too young at the time of the Coronation, to see this never-to-be-forgotten spectacle. Fourthly, we have an idea that it is good for us occasionally to be reminded of our history and traditional background, by reviewing these basic fundamentals of our Commonwealth. What better time than now? Lastly, it may be the last opportunity to see this film before it is withdrawn from service. (See J. Arthur Rank letter in our box office.) A great and glorious spectacle!

VIEWS OF SPORT

By Red Smith

Philip DeCatesby Ball was a crusty, irascible millionaire who owned the St. Louis Browns from 1916 until his death in 1933. Baseball clubs in his day did not announce the turnstile count, but that was no great handicap to a conscientious reporter. Counting the customers in the grandstand and bleachers was only a moment's work.

Memory retains no instance of Phil Ball complaining about indifferent fan support. One rainy day the Red Sox were in town, wretched second-division companions of the Browns. About noon Willis Johnson, the St. Louis road secretary, telephoned Ball for permission to postpone the game; rain had been falling all morning, he pointed out, and they wouldn't draw three dozen fans.

"I'm coming out," Ball said. "Open the gates."

For the boss and several friends, the game was played.

Harry Sinclair, the oilman who raised horses under the green and white silks of Rancocas Farm, asked his friend Ball how much his baseball hobby cost him. Maybe a hundred thousand a year, Ball said, give or take.

"You must be insane!" Sinclair said.

"Oh, I don't know," Ball said. "How much do you lose on those horses?"

"That's different," Sinclair said indignantly.

O Tempore, O Mores

Whenever Ball was asked how long he proposed to go on picking up the tab for the Browns, his reply never changed: "Until we win a pennant." He should have lived so long.

Even in Ball's time, there were men in baseball who considered his attitude unhealthy. Perhaps they were right, for although Ball could afford expensive toys there were other owners who couldn't and there were series in St. Louis when the visiting club's cheque didn't meet the hotel bill.

Perhaps they were right, but a fan looking back can't help feeling there was something pretty wonderful about guys like Phil Ball. Maybe that's because they've gone out of fashion like questing knights.

"Baseball," the late William Wrigley said when he owned the Cubs, "is too much a business to be a sport, and too much a sport to be a business."

Today that dilemma has been resolved. Nobody has to be told in what direction.

The Losers Say, "Deal"

How long has it been since a baseball owner used the phrase "for the good of the game" in a context where "for the good of my bank account" wouldn't fit even more aptly?

It is said repeatedly that in today's tax structure rich men are indifferent to financial losses because deficits can be written off in tax returns. "They let the government pay," is the popular way of phrasing it—popular, that is, outside of baseball.

Explaining why he might ultimately deem it necessary to move the Dodgers, Walter O'Malley compared his team's income in Brooklyn with that of Lou Perini's Braves in Milwaukee. There was such a disparity in Perini's favor, he said, that if it continued unchanged the day would come when the Dodgers wouldn't be able to compete with the Braves.

"But even if you did equal business at the box office," the Dodgers' president was reminded, "you could never match bankrolls with Perini."

O'Malley brushed that off. The day was past, he said, when owners willingly dipped into their own pockets to support the team. Like any other business, the enterprise was supposed to pay for itself.

Curiously, one of the last owners who absorbed losses cheerfully is Lou Perini, the man whose example has made the profit motive a fervor among his fellows. "I don't mind losing one hundred thousand dollars or so," he said after one disastrous season in Boston, "but six hundred thousand dollars to seven hundred thousand dollars—that's a little rough."

When it's tax time in Milwaukee, chances are he says, "I don't mind making a lousy fortune—but this is preposterous."

The Cooler Years

It must be said in fairness that there is one hypocrisy which cannot be charged against the owners of today. They do not pretend to be selfless missionaries carrying the major league gospel to the heathen of the west. They are candidly seeking money, not martyrdom.

If baseball is a business which businessmen enter for profit, then it would be unreasonable to expect them to operate at a charity, for nobody expects that of Wanamaker's, Manischewitz or United States Steel. Only when they pretend it's a sport can another view be supported.

Today's public seems to have accepted the premise that baseball is all business. In the winter of 1926-27 when Sam Breadon traded the Cardinal hero, Rogers Hornsby, away from St. Louis, fans stoned Sam's car in the streets. Today an owner talks of shipping away 25 heroes, and nothing is hurled but opprobrium.

Dynamic Spurs Wallop Dour Scots in Thriller

By IAN GLENDAY

VANCOUVER — Tottenham Hotspur, regarded by many as the best touring club ever to appear in Canada during its 1952 North American visit, again demonstrated its soccer artistry on the springy turf of Empire Stadium here Saturday night, easily mastering an outclassed Celtic club.

Scoring four straight goals in the first 20 minutes of the second half, the rugged London First Division team ran away from the lighter Scots for a 6-3 victory after being held to a 2-2 deadlock at half-time.

A record Western Canada soccer crowd of 21,122 fans, a good many of them pro-Celtic, watched the Spurs explode with unexpected suddenness in the early minutes of the second half and pull away to their second straight victory over the Glasgow team and fourth win of their eight-game North American tour.

OUT-RUN, OUT-SHOT

Leaving little doubt in the minds of even the staunchest Celtic supporters as to which was the better club, Tottenham proved the master in every department as they outran, out-shot and out-manoeuvred the Scots at almost every turn.

Many fans left the park even more convinced that English soccer is much superior to the Scottish brand at the moment, and many were openly disappointed at the performance of the tradition-steeped Glasgow team.

The Spurs didn't play their best at all times, and appeared to ease up several times during the action-filled match. But when they turned on all of their soccer wizardry, it was a treat to watch and helped to offset a match which didn't quite live up to expectations.

PURPOSEFUL ATTACK

Tottenham had purpose to its attack, moving the ball easily with well-placed passes and making some beautiful openings for the fast-moving and aggressive forwards time and again. The ball did most of the work and it moved with rapidity and accuracy from foot to foot, keeping the Celtic defenders on the run all night. territorial play but was seldom dangerous. Only the right side of the forward line — International Bobby Collins on the wing and Willie Fernie at inside — proved dangerous and it was this pair who gave the rangy Hotspur backs the most trouble.

Celtic's fullback combination of Frank Meechan and John Fallon was caught out of position repeatedly and only the outstanding play of goalkeeper John Bonnar, who made a number of remarkable saves, and the tireless work of captain and International Bobby Evans at right-half helped keep out the eager Spurs.

Neil Mochan, reported to have the hardest shot in Scottish football, proved it with two blistering drives at Tottenham goalkeeper Ron Reynolds, but the left side of Celtic's attacking unit was starved for the ball much of the time.

CLEVER ROAMER

Bob Smith, a stockily-built centre forward who has carried the scoring lead for Tottenham, and substitute inside left Alf Stokes were the stars up front for the Spurs.

Smith, who roamed all over the field and managed to elude Celtic centre-half John Hack time and again, scored two goals to make it 13 in the four matches. Stokes also scored twice and Blanchflower, on the prettiest goal of the night, and Terry Dyson got the other Tottenham markers.

Action came fast and furious in the opening minutes with Smith breaking through alone on a pass from clever inside right Tommy Harmer and scoring at two minutes, and Eric Smith replying for Celtic 30 seconds later on a shot that went through the legs of Reynolds.

PERFECT CENTRE

Tottenham again took the lead when Stokes beat Bonnar to the ball on a beautiful cross by Dyson and headed into the net. But the Scottish team came back for a 2-2 half-time tie when Collins drove in a penalty kick for hands against left full-back Ron Henry.

Hotspurs staged a tremendous exhibition in the first 10 minutes of the second half with Dyson first-timing from a corner at two minutes, Smith slipping behind the defence for his second goal at four minutes, and Blanchflower racing in to hit a drop pass by Mike Dulin into the top corner of the net.

Stokes finished off the Tottenham scoring at 20 minutes and Billy McPhail, well-covered at centre-forward by John Ryden, blasted in a fine shot at 34 minutes for Celtic's final goal.

Young Mainland Swimmer Sets Fourth Canadian Record

David Gayton, 14-year-old ace of the Vancouver Amateur Swimming Club, bettered his own Canadian record for the 50-yard intermediate boys' breaststroke last night as 112 swimmers competed in the annual B.C. championship gala at the Crystal Garden.

Gayton, who holds three other Canadian records as well, was timed in 31.2 seconds, chopping nine-tenths of a second off his old record. The time is also better than the senior Canadian record for the same event.

GOOD TIMES

Gayton's was the only record-breaking effort of the gala, although most of the times in the 20 events, including heats, were close to the existing Dominion marks. Gayton also won the intermediate freestyle.

Closest race of the night was the senior men's 200-yard freestyle relay, the last event on the program. Vancouver Amateur Swimming Club won it, after a terrific spurt by Otto Waitzner of the host Victoria Amateur Swimming Club had brought his team up from third and into contention. Only one and four-tenths seconds separated the winners from third-place Victoria YMCA.

Biggest winner for the two Victoria clubs was Janie Wheaton of the Y, who won the intermediate girl's 50-yard breaststroke and the 50-yard intermediate freestyle.

Class and Poise Shatters Scots

BY TOM TAYLOR

VANCOUVER—'Twas a sad night. Haggis has the edge over roast beef in Vancouver, but alas Tottenham Hotspur didn't care. They made such hearty repast of famed Glasgow Celtic a certain ham-curer here might not open on Monday.

Thoroughbreds and selling platers. That was the story.

Perhaps there's a slight exaggeration here. The Celts had their moments. Bobby Collins, for instance, who was in Spain a week ago and flew here to keep the green-and-white colors flying, sparkled like a diamond, at least to begin with. Had the other Celts been of his ilk the story might have been different.

As it is the score, 6-3, tells a true tale. Had it not been for the lithe Bonnar in goal, in fact, whose anticipation at times was uncanny, the Spurs might have doubled their goals. This young lad was a hero.

* * *

The only one, I'm sorry to say. Frankly, the Celts disappointed. Seldom did they show the class one expects from a club of its tradition. I'll wager indeed that the All-Stars do better on Monday night against the London cracks than the men from Parkhead did.

The latter had bags of tricks but they displayed them lazily. They lack the kind of swift ball control, the pass given and taken as speed, that was so marked a year ago with the Lokomotivs and Everton.

The continentals have taught the lesson of fast manoeuvre and ball distribution, and English teams seem to have learned it better than the Scots.

The Spurs had poise, too, an almost disdainful approach as though the job was too easy. And when they had to pour it on they showed no mercy.

* * *

Never did the Celts achieve balance and cohesion. They played in fits and starts. Some of them scarcely prayed at all, as a matter of fact, the chief criticism might be that they lacked spirit.

The game began so beautifully, too. The teams came out to a shout from 21,000 throats that might have been the famed "Hampden roar" slightly muted. And the tartan tams waved their tories as the Glasgow team followed behind big, hefty, hard-blowing pipers.

And the opening was electric. For a moment it could have been a hockey game, or a lacrosse one. Two goals in about two minutes is not usual soccer fare. And when one went each way it looked as though a battle royal was coming up.

In a way it did, up till half-time, for although Tottenham were superior in movement, cleaner in their split-second passing, it might have turned out to be anybody's game. The Spurs had the midfield advantage, but near goal their mastery wasn't marked, and the Celtic right wing, diminutive chaps but artful as monkeys, threatened to turn the scale. Two goals each at half-time was perhaps a fair result.

* * *

What happened in the dressing rooms during the interval we'll never know. Perhaps what happened on the field after that stemmed from a quaint arrangement while the teams were off. A brass band and a pipe band marched round the field, bith playing at the same time. I need scarcely tell you that the resultant musical sound was a decided mixture.

It wasn't a Scotch broth, either, for in no time at all the Hotspurs demonstrated their real stature. The Celts, by comparison, fell apart. Their defence was as full of holes as a sieve.

In 20 minutes the Londoners were out in front by four clear goals, their dynamic Bobby Smith, the prolific scorer of the tour, denting the net twice. Thereafter they toyed, pretty nearly, with the green-and-white brigade.

And then, nearing the end, the slim lad McPhail, who until then had a feckless night, slammed home a scorcher to raise the Scottish spirit. The band played, or a recording I daresay, "Scots Wha Hae," and for the glory of Parkhead and the land of the heather the Celts at last showed their stuff. On they stormed, sweeping up the field time and time again, throwing the spurs into their first disorder, and giving the London goalie heart failure.

It was a gallant last-ditch effort, but it didn't make a Bannockburn out of Flodden. The die was cast long before.

It just wasn't the right day for Vancouver Mounties at Capilano Stadium Saturday afternoon.

Charlie Metro's veteran club, the early-season surprise in the Pacific Coast Baseball League race, took it on the chin for the second straight day and finally lost first place to the onrushing San Francisco Seals.

Hollywood's third-place Stars spoiled a perfect baseball afternoon for 3,028 shirt-sleeved Mountie fans, scoring a 7-4 victory over a Vancouver club which showed little batting punch and which had a rough day afield.

The Mounties, whose hustle, speed and tight defence has proved a big part of their success to date, could do little right yesterday and certainly didn't look the part of a contending club.

Mounties booted the ball three times, made the wrong play on several occasions and came up with a pair of costly "mental" errors when infield mixups put Hollywood players on first base on plays that should have been easy outs.

English Soccer Boosts Wages

LONDON (AP)—England's soccer bosses today handed out pay increases to their professional football players in a bid to check the lure of wealthy foreign clubs.

The Football League decided to increase the winter maximum weekly wage by £2 to £17. The summer weekly wage also was stepped up by £2 to £12. Officials additionally agreed to hand out more bonus money and to pay the players extra for televised matches.

These moves followed a demand for a new pay deal after Leeds United transferred John Charles to Italy's Juventus team for a reported £50,000. Charles also received an estimated £10,000 from the Italians.

Under English soccer rules a player can receive only £10 when he moves from one club to another, regardless of the transfer fees.

It was also decided at the annual meeting that English soccer will have four divisions after next season.

The Football League now has three divisions with the lowest division divided into northern and southern halves. Under the new system, there will be four divisions, with two teams being promoted and relegated from each league.

Wiffi Earns Rating . . . . . . As Babe's Successor

Golf Queen Drives a 1928 Ford to Her Coronations

By OSCAR FRALEY

The ladies of the links insist today, with uniadylike emphasis, that a chunky youngster named Wiffi Smith is the new Babe Zaharias of women's golf.

This is much like comparing the rookie Mickey Mantle with Babe Ruth, amateur-day Floyd Patterson with Jack Dempsey or this year's winner of the national amateur with Ben Hogan.

But the Fairway fillies figure that the 20-year-old Wiffi can't miss.

There are many reasons. First of all, she powders the ball a long ton. Add to that the silken touch of a pickpocket on the greens and the poise of a second story man in an empty house and you have the qualities which won the Dallas Open and have kept her well up among the money winners elsewhere during her brief career.

Wiffi is the breezy young Californian who looks enough like Patty Berg to be her sister and has been making golf headlines since she was 14. At that age, only two years after playing her first round, she won the championship of the Country Club at Guadalajara, Mexico, where her parents had moved from Redlands, Calif.

That was a tremendous incentive for the five-foot, six-inch redhead with the prize crop of freckles. Two years later, at 16, she copped the women's Western Open and at 17 she took the world amateur at Tam O'Shanter.

That, the lady pros will tell you, wasn't even the beginning. Because last year Wiffi had a tremendous grand slam within reach when she took the British and French amateurs but then fell by the wayside in the U.S. event. It was enough to convince her that she had the shots to make golf a paying proposition, so she turned professional.

Right now she's one of the big threats in the triangle round robin, which has attracted the top 16 women pros to Virginia Beach, Va., in a five-round tussle May 29-June 2.

If there's anything Wiffi, a solid 160-pounder, likes better than golf it's her 1928 Ford touring car.

"Of course it runs," she flares. "I drive it all over and have put 7,500 miles on it since I turned pro in January. It's a wonderful car—even though none of the other girls will ride in it with me."

But they do follow her, in more modern machines, just to be sure Wiffi doesn't break down and get lost somewhere. After all, there was only one Babe Didrikson Zaharias. Anything remotely resembling her is a real prize at the box office. And Wiffi, they'll tell you, is it.

White Sox, Reds in Series? It Looks Better Every Day

Cincinnati Reds and Chicago White Sox would make a world series pairing more than acceptable to most major league baseball fans, and the way things are going, it's more than a possibility.

Both clubs stretched their leads yesterday, the White Sox to an impressive five games with a combination of good pitching and base-path speed and the Reds to two and a half games on raw power backing up a well-pitched game.

SEVEN HOME RUNS

Seven home runs were clouted by the Cincinnati club as it overpowered Chicago 22-2 in the season's biggest outburst of scoring.

Frank Robinson hit two and Wally Post, Hal Jeffcoat, Gus Bell, Ed Bailey and Don Hoak each hit one as the Reds tagged Bob Rush for the major league record which they already share.

The middle three innings produced 29 runs as the Reds unloaded for three runs in the fourth, nine in the fifth and seven in the sixth.

It was so bad that the huge Cincinnati scoreboard couldn't keep up with events. It's geared to handle only 19 runs and 19 hits and the Reds had 22 of each.

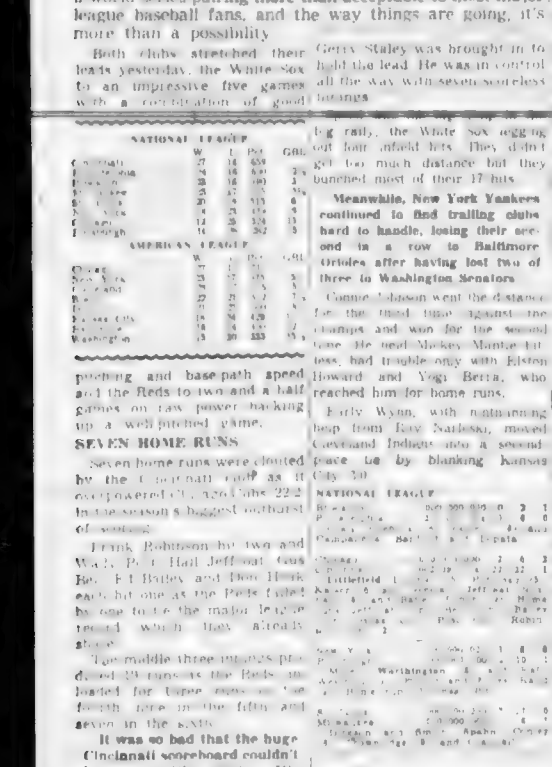
Philadelphia's amazing Phillies climbed into second place as rookie Jack Sanford blanked Brooklyn Dodgers, 3-0, with a fine two-hitter.

And Milwaukee Braves slowed down, 7-1, as Moeller Burdette came up with his best performance of the season to pitch St. Louis Cardinals to a 7-1 triumph.

CRUSH TIGERS

The White Sox came from behind to splatter Detroit Tigers, 12-4, after veteran Jim Wilson had belted out in the first inning, trailing by 2-0.

Seventeen-year-old Jim Derrington, a bonus rookie, pitched the second inning and was tagged for another run but when the Sox rallied for six runs in their half of the second veteran Gerry Staley was brought in to hold the lead. He was in control all the way with seven scoreless innings.



big rally, the White Sox legging out four infield hits. They didn't get too much distance but they bunched most of their 17 hits.

Meanwhile, New York Yankees continued to find trailing clubs hard to handle, losing their second in a row to Baltimore Orioles after having lost two of three in Washington Senators.

Connie Johnson went the distance for the third time against the champs and won for the second time. He used Mickey Mantle hit to lose, had trouble only with Elston Howard and Yogi Berra, who reached him for home runs.

Snead in Spectacular Round; Sets Up Round-Robin Finish

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. (UP) — Masters champion Doug Ford, hitting the ball farther than he ever has in his life, whipped through his fourth straight sub-par round with a 3-under 67 Saturday and held an eight-point lead in the Palm Beach round-robin golf championship with one more round to play.

The Horseshoe Ford, in the same spectacular grove that moved him to the front with earlier rounds of 69-68-71, amassed a total of 11 points against his three opponents for a score of 295-19 under the four-round scoring system by which points are won or lost by comparing hole scores with each foursome.

But hard at Ford's heels came slammin' Sammy Snead, a four-time winner of the event, who equalled the Wykagyl course record as Ford had Friday with a 33-31—64 for a haul of 18 points and second place at plus 31.

Control This Killer

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

SICK TOMATOES (J.B., Victoria.) From the fairly distorted appearance of the leaves, there is no the slightest doubt but that your tomato plants are suffering from 2,4-D damage. Some one must have been spraying weeds in your immediate neighborhood. The fumes have drifted down upon your by the plants' roots.

This kind of trouble is becoming increasingly common and I am afraid that unless we learn how to use 2,4-D properly laws will have to be passed prohibiting its use.

To appreciate this weed-killer in a fine mist spray is extremely dangerous not only to our own plants but through the entire neighborhood. Always use a non-volatile form of 2,4-D and never with a Killer Kane or an Eddy Wand applicator, the kind which fits on the mouth of a one-gallon vinegar jug.

Spraying the foliage of your tomato plants with a weak fertilizer solution may help them to grow out of the trouble but the prospects are not hopeful.

TENT CATERPILLARS (J.E.B., Sidney.) Tent caterpillars are fairly easy to control if you spend a little prompt action against them. Just prune off the branches carrying nests and burn them, doing the job in the [illegible] when the weather is [illegible] spray the foliage of the trees with DDT, the 50 per cent wettable kind, 2 tablespoonfuls per gallon of water with a little Duft added to make it stick.

REGAL LILY (P.M., Victoria.) To encourage a bed of these beautiful lilies to [illegible] explore the bulbs on October. Make up a very bad [illegible] with one gallon up the old bed by digging in plenty of leaf mould rotted manure or fibrous loam together with a generous dressing of coarse bone meal.

Don't leave the bulbs out of the soil any longer than you can help, and keep them covered with a damp sack while the bed is being rejuvenated.

Replant only the plump mature bulbs to use ornamental bed growing on the bulbs and use to use a vegetable garden [illegible] enough to flower.

As the flowers fade cut off the heads to prevent the formation of a seed pod and have the whole length of stem intact. If you cut the stems [illegible] be arranged [illegible]

SPRAY FOR EDIBLE CROPS (P.R.S., Victoria.) While most of our modern insecticides are safe to use on vegetable crops up to within a couple of weeks before they are to be picked and eaten, it is always a good idea to keep a supply of Dusts on hand for use in the later stages of growth.

Where Dusts do not [illegible] as the more powerful insecticides, a spray effective and non-poisonous to humans and other warm-blooded animals, affecting only insects and fish, is quite safe to spray or dust with this material right up to harvest time.

Opening lead: ♠ K

With the singleton spade in Main view in dummy, West switched to a heart, choosing the seven as the card best suited to deceive declarer. South didn't dare take the heart finesse at trick one. After taking dummy's king, it was tempting to try to get to the hand by ruffing a second round of clubs. Instead, South chose to take a [illegible] Lorenzo Hal de Leon Richard Benjamin of the Hollywood [illegible] said the singleton heart. The other defender wasted the [illegible] and led a second heart and the ensuing ruff would set the contract no matter how favorably the diamonds were played.

[illegible] carefully thought [illegible] in making the contract for declarer started to lay down dummy's ace of diamonds. The king dropped and two more rounds of trumps exhausted East and put the lead on South's hand. He led a heart, looked [illegible] on West's discard that made it seem like he had tied the top of a doubleton, but [illegible] with the right answer. Guessing dummy's ace.

South's play was [illegible] of the bidding. West could be in the hearts to least a heart [illegible] expected to get at least a ruff. When West showed up with a second heart it was obvious that he [illegible] expected to get the ruff. South believed that if West [illegible] two hearts he would certainly shift to clubs at trick two. As a further tip-off, South had already seen three singletons. Two balanced one another, but the third made it [illegible] that there would be [illegible] South made five diamonds.

Less aggressive players in Sunday's game would have made not even one trick but with [illegible] much less two. Of course South didn't actually expect to make six but he was trying to take the least expensive sacrifice against what appeared to be a certain unplayable game. In fact, East and West could have made five spades losing only one trick in each of the red suits.

WINNING POINTS

East was wrong to pass five diamonds. West's a forcing pass. It should have been obvious that South was trying to save. Looking at the singleton heart, the bidding should have told East that his partner had but one diamond. East should have bid five spades.

Star, Writer, Director

If Movie Flops He's to Blame

HOLLYWOOD (UP) — Cornel Wilde has no one but himself to blame if his new [illegible] isn't a smash hit. He was producer, director, star, [illegible] and editor of The Devil's Harem.

Wilde didn't even complain about his leading lady, sweet Wallace Ben, his wife, his spouse.

"You never have a minute to relax," he groaned. "I've worked from seven in the morning until seven at night without a moment off.

"As an actor I could take a [illegible] in a few days while the crew set up a new scene, but not any more.

"Why then does Wilde block himself out? He doesn't need the money.

"The real reason I'm branching out is that I want to remain active after my years as a leading man are over. A man doesn't have to worry about his appearance or his age when he's working behind the cameras," Wilde said.

His first two independent efforts, Storm Fear and The Big Combo, were made on his own. The Devil's Harem, a sports car racing drama, was made in conjunction with Paramount.

The studio will release the film but I want it. Wilde went on. "Think of all the money I saved by not having to hire a separate producer, director, writer and star."

The Tight Money Story:

THE FACT: Since the tight money policy was introduced a year ago the cost of living has increased by three full points.

THE FACT The cost of living went up four points in April. The tight money policy is creating [illegible] and living costs will continue to increase as long as it is in force.

THE FACT The B.C. lumber industry has been torpedoed by the tight money policy. There are 10 per cent fewer jobs in the woods and the sawmills this year.

Other Facts on Tight Money

[illegible] capital is pouring into Canada at a faster rate than ever before because the provincial and municipal governments and private industries cannot borrow money in Canada. The 7 per cent premium on the Canadian dollar makes investment in Canada more profitable than in any other country in the world.

Federal government experts are not agreed that the tight money policy is sound. Some of the leading economists at Ottawa are opposed to it.

Leading industrialists and economists outside the government have attacked the tight money policy.

The Financial Times of London, the world's outstanding financial paper, criticizes Canada's tight money policy.

Who have the Liberals persisted in continuing the tight money policy?

Because it was politically unsound at election time, Liberal the government had made a mistake in introducing this policy last year.

Are You Out of Shape?

Easy Does It This Season

[illegible]

Summer seems to be here. At least anyone would imagine it was by the increased outdoor activities of Victoria's citizens.

At the first sign of fine weather a large number of [illegible] variety of activities involving varying degrees of physical effort. Few activities are free. They should be encouraged but a word of caution is offered in regard to the extra physical burden and load on our bodies.

Every year at this time housewives seize their cleaning equipment, husbands nuts and bolts, and young men and children increase their pace at sports and games. Good weather seems to be the signal to prepare for summer relaxation. This sport of action is quite understandable after our long, dreary winter. Mentally we are prepared for the change, but often our bodies cannot adjust as rapidly.

After [illegible] activity, more thought should be given to looking after ourselves. By pacing [illegible] ambitious gardeners and weekend athletes will live longer and more happy lives.

Our bodies are machines and they should be cared for and checked up in the same manner as you treat your automobiles. As you will be more active physically this spring why not make an appointment with your doctor for a physical checkover. An annual spring medical examination would enable busy gardeners, fishermen, and athletes to keep fit and allow them to take part in all their favourite outdoor activities more safely.

[illegible] effort. By choosing one's own [illegible] recreation, in addition, a weekend should be a time of relaxation [illegible]

Following new physical effort you should have enough sleep. Rest is always important, but particularly so following strenuous exercise. Fortunately, restful sleep usually follows increased exercise. Good food in a greater quantity may be necessary after your spring-time sport. But with food and drink as with exercises, practice moderation.

[illegible] harm that can never be repaired.

Ring-Tailed Circus

Mrs. Phil Rislow and daughter Sherrie of Weston, Ont., have six ring-tailed monkeys for pets and they recommend them for anyone looking for a lively household. Science Keeps Well Abreast of Loggers' Needs

NEW GIANT in the WOODS

IN A LITTLE CAGE, protected by steel canopy and heavy wire mesh, the operator sits comfortably and with a flick of his fingers guides his awkward-appearing vehicle and its ten-ton load.

It costs big money [illegible] roads anywhere in B.C. But in this rugged [illegible] along the Alberni [illegible] it is particularly difficult to build economically. The Arch people had to build or quit [illegible] over.

So they calculated that a vehicle which could haul their [illegible] over a [illegible] steep, [illegible] and [illegible] could produce [illegible] more [illegible] than [illegible].

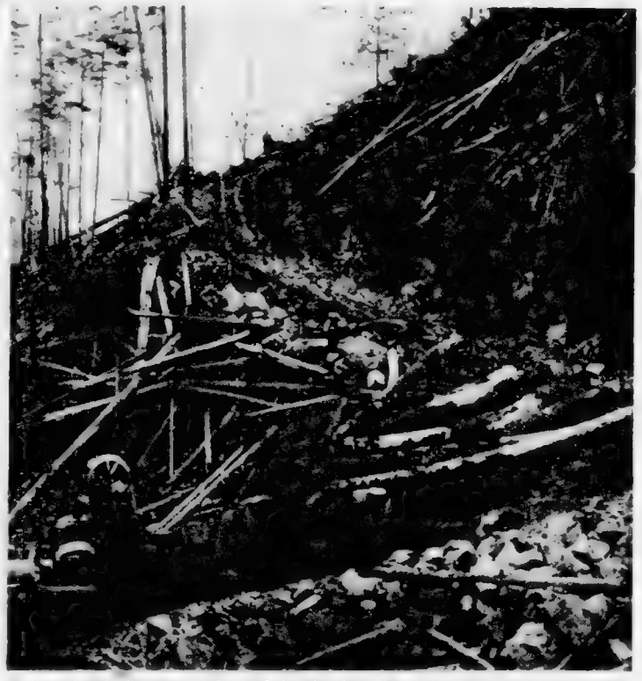
* * *

[illegible] the logs with a separate wire [illegible] and it lifts them off the ground with the arch for [illegible] and simply [illegible] along behind it.

What the arch accomplishes is this. It [illegible] and [illegible] on [illegible] a [illegible] to [illegible] [illegible] skidder can handle them.

At the Arden operation the arch is working more than [illegible] feet from the [illegible] in the spur line and at [illegible] of about [illegible] per [illegible]. It is averaging better than [illegible] and feet on [illegible] or [illegible] 70,000 feet a day. It can keep pace with the woods [illegible] in rain or shine.

That's another [illegible] about the [illegible] Arch. Arden [illegible] say it [illegible] Weather doesn't matter much.



Arch can handle the output of the woods in spite of wet skid roads. The machine isn't carrying the weight of the logs, it only lifts their ends to give them clearance, and drags them to tidewater.

DEFEAT IS FOR WEAKLINGS

By JIM BISHOP

SOMETIMES A MAN is more clearly seen by looking at his father. You can look at Ed Sullivan all day and what you will see is a sad, serious, fiftyish man sitting on the lid of his emotions.

But if you spend a moment or two studying Edward's father, [illegible] pleasant courage. Once when the Sullivans were living in Port Chester, N.Y., a boaster was chased from the backyard. [illegible] heart [illegible] started at his pursuing sons in disbelief and then cooked out, hopped a fence into the next yard. Walked into a neighbor's kitchen, gratified his thirst by helping [illegible] planted at the eating family, and growled:

"If any of you ever so much as lays a hand on anything of mine again I'll break all of you in half."

He walked out.

* * *

Ed still aspires to have that kind of physical courage. He hasn't got it. He has moral courage; lots of it. No one can speak disparagingly of another race or another faith in Sullivan's presence. No one can "shove" him. Sullivan is unafraid, even politically. He contributed to the campaign of Adlai Stevenson and made no secret of it.

Peter raised a good-sized family on a secret salary. He worked as a practical apprentice to the [illegible] Department. Ed has never forgotten pastry for [illegible] recognition for being the guy that he was. So Ed has become the celebrate [illegible] he strives harder and [illegible] to be a typical American, and he wants to be known as a decent and good man. Every thing is carefully [illegible] to Peter's scales.

Come to Quantico, Ed Sullivan was invited to stage a show for the United States Marines. President Dwight Eisenhower was present. So was John Foster Dulles and Charles E. Wilson. Before the show there was a crowded party for the brass. An officer visited Sullivan and said that he was ordered to invite an invitation to Ed to attend the private party and to be presented to the President of the United States.

Sullivan beamed. "The cast, too?" he said.

"I'm sorry, sir," the officer said. "Just you."

"Then go back," snapped Sullivan, and tell them I decline with thanks."

* * *

Peter would have nodded approval of that line. He would not have clapped his son on the back, or applauded, because Peter knew that real men were iron, and emotional displays were a woman's business. Once—just once—was Pete Sullivan seen weeping.

That was in 1947 when Ed [illegible] years of age [illegible] Marines [illegible] saved a little money. Ed was prepared to go back. He went home to stay on a Friday. Peter wrecked him walk into the kitchen and the fifteen [illegible] boy got his [illegible] and opening. [illegible] the fabric but [illegible] The boy's facade did not crack.

There were seven children in the Sullivan family. Edward and a [illegible] were born on Sept. 28, 1902. Dennis died before his first birthday. [illegible] Ed's birthday. At age [illegible] that he was [illegible] watch over him.

Not long ago Ed Sullivan was [illegible]

Ma [illegible] show dropped into [illegible] accident. It's my deepest point [illegible] not so much my own. But the prayers of priests and nuns I have known. And certainly the prayers and intercession of those close to me who have died.

Sullivan despises any show of emotion—in himself. He has fought back at life with a desperate courage, for to admit defeat would be the ultimate humiliation. He has a dreadful fear of showing weakness.

In spite of his strong spiritual side Ed Sullivan is not an outstanding Catholic layman. He is chairman of his favorites are Marist Brothers of Framingham Centre, Mass.; the New York Catholic Charities, the Heart Fund and Sister Kenny. Ed he does not wear his [illegible] as a chip on his shoulder. Often when [illegible] goes with him he wear a medal [illegible] because he thinks it should set a good example.

Like most theatrical performers, he seldom gets to bed before 1 a.m. When he gets to mass it is almost always to [illegible] St. Patrick's Cathedral. [illegible] Ed's [illegible] When the light [illegible] boulevards are [illegible] he goes to secret and attends [illegible] services. Every night of the year seven stands at the [illegible] which [illegible]

Young Sullivan loves the stage.

He quit high school [illegible] worked in factories [illegible] of a semi-professional baseball team [illegible] Chester team, as sports [illegible] Salary $18. Later Ed got an offer of a better job as sports writer on the Hartford [illegible] he was [illegible] a big farewell party before he left home.

In a week or two he [illegible] the job and he kept [illegible] about the [illegible] party and Ed [illegible] again [illegible] home. He sat in a [illegible] house in Hartford wondering what to do next. Dejected and humiliated were for [illegible]

He was lucky. [illegible] Ed got a letter from the sports editor of the New York Evening [illegible] sports of the Eighth Wonder [illegible]

Canadians Storm Britain's Stage

By RICHARD L. THOMAS
The Islander's London Correspondent

SOME TIME AGO I wrote of the Australian invasion of the English entertainment world. I wondered where the Canadians were, and rather assumed that pounds worth only $2.70 made London life too complicated if there were obligations at home. Then Irene Salemko stormed the gates from Weyburn, Saskatchewan, and gave us a devastating performance of Mimi in La Boheme at Sadler's Wells opera house. That was just over a year ago.

Churchill's Story

SPY'S FATE IS DEATH

By SIR WINSTON S. CHURCHILL

IT was not until the beginning of May that Lord Roberts had replenished his magazines sufficiently to begin his march upon Johannesburg and Pretoria.

[illegible]

Travelled in Comfort

Dislodged By Bayonet

Here on June 1, 1900, was fought what in those days was considered a sharp action. The Boers, buried amid the jagged outcropping rocks of the ridges, defied bombardment and had to be dislodged by the bayonet.

[illegible]

The author was nearing the end of a great adventure of what was to be a lifetime of adventure at the time of which he writes in this episode of his early career. The heavy fighting of the Boer War was nearly over and he had distinguished himself as a correspondent and—with a little luck and influence—as a soldier. It was influence that brought the opportunities. But he always made the most of them. Next week Sir Winston concludes this brilliant story in THE ISLANDER.

[illegible]

Pretoria capitulated four days later. My re-entry of the Boer capital was exciting.

"Where do you spring from?"

"We have come from Ian Hamilton. I have brought a dispatch for the commander-in-chief."

NEXT WEEK: Churchill returns to England for a hero's welcome, is elected to Parliament.

Children of the Ya-Ee

An Indian Legend

By ALFRED CARMICHAEL

With my family I spent two weeks of the summer of 1922 camped on a sandy beach near to Bamfield, West Coast of Vancouver Island.

In a small canoe, I visited the Ohyaht Indian village situated on Dodger Cove, Dianna Island, my object to gather Indian legends from the Indians themselves.

From three old Indians, Sa-sa-wat-in, his wife Yim-a-uk and Hy-na-um I heard in Chinook, with which I was familiar, and broken English enhanced by interpretative gestures, the story of The Flood.

The story revealed that the Ohyaht Indians believed in the existence of a "different people," mountain dwellers. Ya-ee, they called them. Their habitat was in the high mountains extending from Uchucklesit to Ucluelet on the northerly side of Barkley Sound.

The legend took several days to tell. I took notes and later wrote it out in Chinook with a free translation attached. This is the story . . .

5TH, VICTORIA'S OWN

By CAPT. A. E. SHERWIN
as told to John Shaw

"Five" is a figure of significance in Victoria's history.

It has been part of the designation of the volunteer garrison artillery unit ever since the scare of a Russian invasion during the Russo-Turkish war.

These were the officers of the 5th Regiment Canadian Garrison Artillery in 1899 and many of the names represent old Victoria families still residing here. Left to right, back row: J. A. Hall, George Langley, H. Graham, A. W. Currie (later Sir Arthur, one of Canada's outstanding generals in the 1914-18 war), Robert Thompson, N. Ridgeway Wilson, W. H. Langley, Tommy Patton; front row: Joseph Pemberton, F. C. Dr. Hart, Major Ross Munro, Lieut. Col. Frank Gregory, Capt. Alex. Martin, Parker Hibben and D. B. McConnan.

Victoria Readers Non-Conformists

VICTORIA'S readers conform to none of the nation-wide patterns in their reading tastes. A case in point, Edwin O'Connor's picture of an Irish politician of fading power but magnetic personality, The Last Hurrah, ranked number two in sales and popularity across Canada and the United States in 1956. In Victoria it had a short two months of popularity and then sat on the shelves.

Being a [illegible] story may have something to do with it but then Angus Wilson's Anglo-Saxon Attitudes had tremendous popularity in Britain but a very lukewarm reception here.

NANAIMO was a HOT SPOT

OPIUM SMOKING, along with the cuspidor, the shaving mug and the five-cent cigar, has gone out of fashion. The complications of modern living, plus additional teeth in the Opium and Narcotics Drug Act, served to eradicate the habit once prevalent among certain of our coast Chinese and a few Europeans.

Few whites were ever addicted to this leisurely and relaxing practice with all its paraphernalia and ritual, although there is a record of one man who attempted the bridge between Orient and Occident. He was Morris Dumas, "Boston Morris" who made history by attempting to smuggle opium in the inner tubes of a Kenny Valley tire [illegible] for a pipe a mass [illegible] and two feet of rubber [illegible]

Guest of Honor Crippled Girl Getting Better

A Kiss to Remember

By TED SHACKLEFORD

Bagpipes skirled, glockenspiels rang, musettes wailed, bass drums boomed, tambourines clashed and nearly 5,000 people applauded in Memorial Arena last night as 3,000 visiting Shriners wound up their two-day Spring Ceremonial.

And sitting in a special box enthusiastically applauding every display by the Shriners, was the unofficial guest of honor, 11-year-old Roberta Ratcliffe, Mount Newton Cross-road, Saanichton.

Roberta was representing, specifically, 11 crippled Victoria children who are being helped along the road to recovery by Shriners, and generally, thousands of similar youngsters all over the continent.

PLAYS BASEBALL

Crippled with cerebral palsy at the age of two, Roberta has been attending the Shriners' Hospital in Portland. She can now temporarily discard the steel braces, which hold her legs straight, to run slowly, play baseball with her school friends at Sidney Elementary, and roller skate with her sister.

She learned to swim two years ago in Daily Colonist classes at Elk Lake. Eventually she will be able to discard the braces altogether.

THE ODD YAWN

As the evening wore on, Roberta yawned occasionally, but it was way past her usual bedtime of 8 p.m. Toward the end of the evening she presented a bouquet to Miss Dorothy Andrew, director of the Portland Shrine Hospital.

Proceeds of the evening went to help 17 hospitals throughout North America.

The temperature in the arena was a humid 80 in the top seats, but the audience didn't care. Spontaneous applause broke out frequently during displays.

Two of the most interested watchers were Mrs. B. Jacklin, 838 Admirals, and her daughter, Mrs. G. Petch, 851 Tillicum. Mrs. Jacklin's son, Ben, was one of the kettle drummers.

SWEETHEART TOUCH

The Temple Scots band from Vancouver, preceded by a scarlet Scottish lion on a golden satin flag, drew rousing applause as it stepped out briskly, red fesses contrasting oddly with the Buchanan tartan kilts.

Pipe Major John McHardy did a spirited Highland Fling on the polished arena floor which had been prepared for the dance which followed the pageant, and Jimmy Fisher, another Vancouver Shriner presented a comedy pianist routine which drew an encore.

BRISK PACE

A brisk pace was established right from the start of the pageant and it continued right through to the end, through the New Westminster Shrine Club Oriental Band's stirring imitation of the Scots band, and the Nile Temple Drum and Bugle Corps from Seattle until the restrained singing of "Bless This House" by the Chanters, which closed the show.

Downtown Victoria was relatively quiet yesterday as many of the Shriners attended the special initiation ceremonies at the arena when 200 candidates went through the mill.

Swiftsure Goes to Maruffa

Yawl Wins Triple Crown

★ ★ ★

Canny Manoeuvre Outwits Everyone

By COURTNEY TOWER

John Graham brought his big, beautiful yawl Maruffa scudding home first at 11:29 a.m. yesterday, in a fast time, by making the right choices and employing a canny night-time manoeuvre. (Detailed results on page 5).

As a result he has three crowns and the knowledge he is the first to log such a record.

BEAT DEAD CALM

He broke out of a dead calm in the early-morning hours to escape from several yachts that, on a handicap basis, had closed in on him. He brought his Seattle Yacht Club craft beating in to win:

The Swiftsure trophy as over-all winner; the City of Victoria trophy as first boat across the finish line, and the brand-new B.C. Cement Co. trophy as AA class winner.

It was Graham's first Swiftsure win with the 67-foot Maruffa since he started racing it here in 1947. The last two years, he had come home first, but lost the over-all trophy because of the yacht's handicap. It was a clear win—by more than 20 miles over the closest yacht to him and by some 30 miles over the only two that could be considered in the running.

WINNER AT LAST

"I've been a bridesmaid more times than I can count in this race," he said. "This time I'm the bride."

The 72-foot-long Diamond Head, owned by Max Wyman of Seattle Yacht Club, came home second, some five and a half hours later.

Third across the line was Richard Philbrick's Sea Fever, another Seattle Yacht Club boat, about 15 minutes later. Adios, last year's Swiftsure winner, Alaiola and Kate II were in next, followed by Cotton Blossom.

EXPERTS RIGHT

Experts guessed that a fast time would be set. They were right—it was 20 hours, 59 minutes. Record of 22 hours was set in the 1930s by the Circe. Maruffa's official corrected time was 21.8.25.

Some experts said it would be better to go through the race between Race Rocks and Williams Head, and that proved to be the faster route.

Maruffa rounded the Swiftsure Lightship 68 miles out in open sea at 11:01 p.m. She soon fell into the same becalmed patch that had held up her approach to the halfway mark of the race. The Sea Fever, Cotton Blossom, Vancouver's Mary Bower and Diamond Head, were closing in.

Cotton Blossom, though six miles behind, on corrected time was actually 28 minutes ahead of Maruffa. Sea Fever was 23 minutes ahead and even Mary Bower was three minutes ahead. Adios and Aurora were close behind. Even Diamond Head had a chance.

But Graham sneaked Maruffa over to the American shoreline near Tatoosh, rather than stick in the becalmed middle stretch or the Canadian side, and followed it down to Pillar Point before crossing over to go through Race Rocks again.

Everything Went Without a Hitch

By DAVID FRANCIS

The easiest race of them all, said John Graham, skipper of the 67-foot yawl Maruffa after docking at Fisherman's Wharf yesterday.

Minutes earlier, its spinnaker, billowing like a white ghost, the beautiful craft had skimmed past the finish line at Ogden Point wharf, winning the Swiftsure classic.

Asked what adventures had befallen the crew and craft, Mr. Graham replied:

"None. Didn't lose anyone overboard. No fog. Nobody seasick. No lost food. Didn't even lose a shackle or a piece of rope."

"This was the easiest race we ever had."

The yawl sported a new laminated wood mast, which skipper Graham said weighed only 800 pounds and didn't actually need a support wire.

The 25 hours, 59 minutes, 28 seconds which the Maruffa took to complete the 136.4 nautical mile course was her fastest time in 10 outings in the Swiftsure race, Mr. Graham said.

"With 22 or 23 miles an hour winds, we were sailing about 7½ to eight knots inward and 9, 10 to 11 knots coming away," he said.

"We were bucking a strong current both in and out. It was almost the lowest tide of the year."

A week ago the Seattle skipper and his crew had sandpapered the bottom of the Maruffa so smooth "a fly couldn't stand on it."

"It makes a big difference to the speed," Mr. Graham said.

Mr. Graham said he got the usual amount of sleep in during the race—none.

However, a large roast of beef Friday night helped keep the morale of skipper and crew high.

Many of the crew had been on previous races and were well trained, he said.

Monday Dime Blitz Aims for Record

Solarium Junior League hopes are high for a record-breaking collection in the one-hour "Shower of Dimes" drive Monday between 6 and 7 p.m.

Slogan of the campaign is "Shower Your Dimes" but the 2,200 canvassers hope to collect much more than dimes when they knock at doors in Greater Victoria, Langford, Strawberry Vale, Brentwood and Ten Mile Point.

Money raised during the drive will be used to maintain the Queen Alexandra Solarium for a two-month period.

Last year the Junior League collected $18,000 during a two-week period but it did not hold a door-to-door drive. It hopes to top this amount Monday with the aid of appeal letters sent throughout the province between June 1 and 15.

The funds raised are necessary to provide food, drugs, dressings, splints, fuel, electricity, clothing and school books for the children in the solarium.

Conservatives in the News . . .

Mr. A. de B. McPhillips, popular Progressive Conservative candidate in the forthcoming election pictured with his family. Mrs. McPhillips, daughter, Jacqueline and son Edward. Mr. McPhillips, who was born in Victoria, comes from a family long connected with the administration of the province. His father was Justice of the Appeal Court and Attorney-General with the Sir Richard McBride government and president of the council at that time. His great uncle Sir Theodore Davie was a premier of British Columbia and instrumental in having the present Parliament Buildings erected. Mrs. McPhillips is also a native daughter of Vancouver Island and called Nanaimo her home for many years. Her grandfather, the late Edward Quesnel was one of the early day settlers in Nanaimo.—(Photo by Jim Ryan.)

Landslide of Volunteers Helps Conservative Cause

By EILEEN LEAROYD

There is high optimism and election-eve excitement in Conservative headquarters, Yates street.

A lot of the excited voices belong to women, both young and old, who make phone calls, address envelopes and generally keep the office humming.

These women have put aside such mundane things as housework with one objective in view. They are trying to make a change in the federal government.

We have a landslide of women volunteers and can they work—says award campaign manager Eric Charman.

He drew out an enormous file of cards returned from a direct mail form. Most of them came in from women. Chosen at random they read like this:

"I'm too old to work for you in town, but these are two votes for you here. No names, no pack drill.

"Send me some typing I can do at home."

"I haven't got a phone, but call my neighbor if you want me."

"Sick of things at Ottawa. John has our vote."

As Mr. Charman explained it, in every election there is an unknown quantity—this is sometimes referred to as "the great silent vote." These people make up a large percentage of the population who do not attend meetings or rallies nor advertise their intentions.

"We feel," he said, "from the great response we have had from the free-way people are talking to us, that we have managed to capture the imagination of the great silent vote."

There were about 20 women in Conservative headquarters when it was visited early in the morning. Another 20 came in at noon and yet another 20 take over from six till eleven p.m.

They were canvassing over the phone, making the arrangements for election day transportation to the polls, answering inquiries by letter and chatting with people who dropped in to see what was going on.

One very busy woman, Mrs. Isobel Wellings whose father was a former Liberal M.P. for Cumberland, Saskatchewan, said: "The Liberals have had it too long in Ottawa. I was doing some spring cleaning yesterday, de-mothing my cupboards and I wished we women could march in to Ottawa and clean it out the same way. Ottawa needs a spring cleaning and a de-mothing."

Mrs. T. W. Gravlin, Mrs. W. Gaunt and Mrs. K. D. Stone were all addressing envelopes. "Every home in Victoria is going to receive a hand-addressed voters' list from us," they said. "There are women all over town helping us from their home."

Mrs. L. Knight, 88, wrote in to say she wanted to help John Diefenbaker and Bert McPhillips. She asked to be sent 100 envelopes and to everyone's amazement the next day she asked for 100 more. Headquarters is kept busy delivering and calling for envelopes at her Estevan Avenue home.

"Young people pour in here at night," they said. "It is wonderful and amazing the way they keep coming. Some of them are helping in the door-to-door canvass. We think we are the only political party who is not having to pay their 'volunteers.'"

We asked the women on the telephone what their incoming calls were all about.

Mrs. Frances Newmarch said that a majority of the calls were from strangers who simply wanted to say they were supporting Diefenbaker because they were sick of the same old party in power for so many years.

"One woman phoned to say she was going to vote Conservative for the first time because she had not realized before the ties she felt for the Commonwealth and she is afraid St. Laurent is giving this country away to the United States.

"A man said he thinks its strange that the Liberals have called Lionel Chevrier back into the party from his $25,000 a year job with the St. Lawrence Seaway. He said Chevrier certainly wasn't leaving that job without big government promises.

"Other people seem sick of hearing the Liberals denying how they forced Eden over the Suez problem. The majority just feel one party has had it too long. They don't like the way parliament was railroaded over the pipeline deal. They want a return to two parties."

Busy Mr. McPhillips seemed every bit as happy as the ladies working for him. "We get criticised too," he said cheerfully, "but only by our opposition. Mr. Bennett is hammering at us now and that's quite a compliment as it was he who said not so long ago, 'You can't shoot a dead duck.'

"Obviously, we are not a dead duck.

"We have a great man in Diefenbaker. The Liberals have their Uncle Louis, we are fortunate in having not an uncle, but a leader."

Mr. Charman had the last word about the women workers.

"They are phenomenal and tireless and enthusiastic. Mrs. Diefenbaker was an amazing woman to watch. She never grew tired; when it was suggested she rest at the hotel she refused. When she left Victoria she wrote a long personal note of thanks. She doesn't forget a thing. She even wrote to the gardener at the Empress thanking him for the flowers in her room. He said that had never happened to him before."

Chasing Him Is Final Way To Shed Him

By ANITA COLBY

The occasion is still remembered around our house as the day my sister put the sugar in the martinis.

It was all for a good cause. There was an overly-persistent suitor on the scene. My sister had tried everything to make him disappear from her life. But he stayed around.

One day she invited this man, a meticulous, too-correct type, to the house for cocktails. She knew he was a "very dry" martini man, one of those purists who drives bartenders nuts. So she mixed a batch of martinis. Then, after she had poured them, into each brimming glass she deposited half a teaspoon of sugar.

She never saw him again.

Of course, all men can't be chased away so easily. And getting rid of the unwelcome suitor can become a chore of epic proportions. Unfortunately, adding to this problem is the fact that most advice to girls revolves around the problem of how to get a man—especially at this time of year with June edging over the horizon and the scent of orange blossoms already making itself noticed.

But any wise girl realizes that if there is one thing worse than not having a man, it is to have a man who is not wanted. This is the man who is not easily daunted, who takes every slight, every touch of coolness as mere girlish coyness and so presses the chase at an even greater clip.

So what to do?

Well, if a girl has to suffer this way, she might as well get a little enjoyment out of the shedding. Tell your thick-skulled Cyrano that you eat only in the most expensive restaurant in town. When he arrives to pick you up, have a hungry girl friend with you. Tell him you're sure he won't mind if she comes along, too.

At the restaurant, stoke up on the caviar, pheasant under glass and truffles. Make sure that only vintage champagne is ordered.

If that doesn't ruin his pocketbook along with his ardor, make yourself conspicuous. Most men are fundamentally conservative; they may ogle the life-of-the-party type but they definitely don't want their dates to behave that way.

So talk loudly. When seated at your table complain that you're in a draft and have the waiter change your position at least three times. Then send the food back, but only after berating the hapless hired help.

What, he's still there?

Thank heaven there's always the telephone. This invention has done much to further romance, but it can also be a double-pointed Cupid's arrow.

When he phones, borrow a trick Helen Hayes learned when playing Queen Victoria: Put apple slices in your cheeks to make your voice sound much older and tell him you're not in—you've just left for Tibet. This may mean an enforced stay in your home for the next few years, but for a man really worth losing, this is small sacrifice to make.

However, if all these maidenly tricks have been tried and found wanting, the one thing left is "operation desperation." This is a tedious and slightly masochistic method, but it's worth a try.

Start chasing the man.

Demand to be with him all the time. You can't bear to be away from him. Phone him at work eight or 10 times a day. When you're not keeping him out all night dancing, you have him at home painting walls, moving furniture or walking the dog. For those girls lucky enough to have a patch of earth around their home, this is a good time to introduce him to the joys of gardening.

There is nothing like an aching back to cool a flaming heart.

Lady Diana Can't Lend Home

PARIS. The Chapel of St. Peter the Fisherman will open its doors to the honest folk of Villefranche this month and some of them are in for a shock. For that one-time bad boy of the arts, Jean Cocteau has done the murals and, as usual, has scorned the orthodox. His holy family, for instance, are all painted with fishes where the eyes should be. Cocteau wants the chapel opened with a marriage ceremony between a fisherman and a fisherlass. So far, no offers, but he's scouring the Riviera coast for candidates.

The consecration of the chapel will be carried out by another unorthodox type—Bishop Remond of Nice who thinks nothing of interrupting his own sermons to announce Sunday football scores to his congregation.

Nothing much had ever happened in Aesop's quiet life. And then one day while he was mooching about in a field on his boss' farm, Brigette Bardot came into his life.

Brigette looked at him and stopped her big red auto. "Isn't he cute?" she giggled. "I want him." And before he had time to blink Aesop found himself bundled into the back seat and whirling away with Miss B.

Enter the boss, Farmer Seguran. A breathless neighbor came running with the news.

Aesop had been carried off by a pretty girl and what was Seguran going to do about it?

Seguran told the police. Three days later he tracked down the runaway, lazing in the garden of Brigette's villa! Sharp words passed between Seguran and Brigette. "I couldn't resist him—don't be mad at me," pouted Brigette. Farmer S. just grunted and bundled Aesop into the back of his van.

Twenty-four hours later Aesop was down on the farm happily eating grass. Aesop is Farmer Seguran's hard-working donkey.

Salvador Dali is still around town. He turned up the other day at Otto Preminger's gala premiere of Bernard Shaw's "St. Joan," moustache bristling as spikily as ever.

An enterprising perfume firm was offering free samples to the ladies in the audience and one tactless lass offered a bottle to Dali.

He gave her one long icy look, from behind his quivering moustache: "Thank you, no. I create my own smells."

Some folk get the quaintest notions. Like Fabienne, a shapely lass who is top model for one of the big dress houses here. Fabienne, it seems, is no modest violet. On the eve of leaving for a world fashion tour she announces as coolly as you please:

"I shall take my cine-camera and film all the men who are going to ask me to marry them—it should make a most interesting documentary."

Mad hatter's tea party given by the wives at SHAPE this week offered prizes for the craziest hat made from items found around the home. Eighty wives entered and produced headgear concocted from bunches of radishes, lamp shades, salad strainers. The winner was a turban made from the flags of 15 nations which make up the SHAPE army. The prize: two spring hats from a top Paris milliner.

Lady Diana Cooper, widow of one time British ambassador Duff Cooper, has been called over the coals by the French government for showing too much hospitality to her American friends at her weekend chateau near Paris.

—The government let her rent it for a mere $90 a year to show their gratitude for Duff Cooper's entente cordiale efforts. But after 10 years they have changed their mind and told her to quit. They have since relented, but only on condition she doesn't go on lending her chateau to American friends when she's away.

Tasty Fare for the Barbecue

With barbecues the summer food craze of the continent, it is a matter of pleasure to discover that the picnic classic definitely has a place on menus as a whole array of roasted or broiled dishes appears for a feast. A far cry from the steaks and chops, hamburgers and casseroles that we find our way to the grill [illegible] from June until fall. However, the hamburg goes on [illegible] from the French, harbinger of [illegible] which matures from [illegible] to day. And as [illegible] was in use on [illegible] long before [illegible] probably accounts for the change in interpretation since [illegible]

Proportions the Same But Perspective Changed

Marilyn Monroe celebrated her 31st birthday Saturday. A month from now she and her playwright husband Arthur Miller will observe their first wedding anniversary.

What is the Marilyn Monroe Miller of today like and what is she looking forward to?

Says British United Press correspondent Gay Pauley, after an interview with the famous blonde movie star, "her proportions are the same, but her perspective has changed.

During the interview the blonde actress with the horizon-tal walk discussed the change her third marriage has made in her life, her future as a housewife, and her future as an actress.

Said Miss Monroe, in that breathless voice she is famous for, "He's the boss of this household."

She added, "I don't think the marriage versus career thing would ever come up with us. But if it ever does, our life together comes first."

Marilyn said that for the first time in her life she feels she has roots and a home life. And she added, "a fine discovery to make at my age."

Has this been a happy year for her?

Oh yes, she said, "so far as being with the person you want to spend the rest of your life with. I'm mad about the man."

She admitted she was concerned about Miller's trouble with a congressional committee and contempt of congress charges.

At present Marilyn and Arthur Miller are living in an unpretentious but comfortable apartment on Manhattan's east side. They're shopping for what Marilyn termed "a lot of acreage" somewhere in Connecticut.

Said the blonde bombshell we both love the outdoors. I'm a hick at heart."

Miss Monroe has reached the point of discussing her choice in interior decoration if and when she and Miller find the acreage and build.

Said the actress, "I'd like sort of a contemporary house. Maybe some modern furniture and some old. I think modern can be cosy. But I don't believe in set ideas, like saying that to be chic it has to be French provincial."

However, the search for a permanent home doesn't mean Marilyn plans to give up her career. Matter of fact she said, "I'm sort of looking forward to the day I can do character parts. I want to be a good actress and when you aren't the star you don't work such long hours."

Right now Miss Monroe has a commitment for three more pictures at 20th Century Fox. Her latest movie "The Prince and the Showgirl" which she made in England with Sir Laurence Olivier, will be released here next month.

Rumors persist that there will be an addition to the Miller family in the near future.

Miss Monroe refuses either to confirm or deny them. She said, "we feel this is a personal thing . . . when the time comes to say anything we will. Of course I would like to have children."

Marilyn Monroe Miller says her measurements are the same as the former Marilyn Monroe's . . . 37½, 24 and 36.

British United Press correspondent Gay Pauley noticed she was sporting a tan and chalked that down as another change in the glamour girl. Marilyn Monroe once told a columnist she didn't like to tan because, in her words, "I like to feel blonde all over."

Vitamin B Group Essential In Well-Balanced Diets

For [illegible] referred to as a [illegible] factors [illegible] essential food [illegible] tion surveys have shown that the B vitamins thiamine, riboflavin and niacin and the rest [illegible] eat more the other in low supply. It was the results of such surveys as well as some [illegible] experiences in other countries which prompted the Canadian government to set standards for the enrichment of white flour and white bread early in 1953. Bread and flour were chosen as the carriers of these B vitamins and iron because they are commonly used low-cost foods which are [illegible] available in all parts of Canada.

Enrichment standards outline both minimum and maximum amounts of nutrients to be added to white flour during the milling process. The resulting enriched white flour is then used with required amounts of skim milk solids (butter in creaming the relative values) to make enriched white bread.

THIAMINE

Perhaps you've heard of thiamine as vitamin B1. It is most important where good digestion and healthy appetites are concerned. If it is missed in children's daily meal resulting poor appetites can affect their normal growth and development. Grown-ups who don't [illegible] sufficient of this food [illegible] probably notice nervous [illegible] sample as lost.

Severe cases of B1 deficiency [illegible] with beriberi, the disease in which some cramped muscles, consciousness, weight loss and often death from heart failure are dreaded symptoms. Incents of more [illegible] ago beriberi was common [illegible] in countries where polished rice was the main staple of diet. But not so today. Thanks to research and improved methods of food production, increasing the enrichment of flour and bread, advanced cases of the disease are now rare in civilized countries.

However, thiamine is [illegible] probably more common than we think. Dr. Russell M. Wilder of the United States Public Health Services a world renowned authority on nutrition and public health says "I have experimental proof that deficiency of this vitamin contributes a degree of deficiency so mild as to defy detection by the doctor but produce disturbances that are tremendous. Stamina and Courage and emotional stability with other qualities of character deteriorate in minor deficiencies before nerves to the arms and legs are affected in any way."

Foods rich in thiamine include pork, peas and beans, peanuts, whole grain and enriched cereals and breads.

RIBOFLAVIN

Riboflavin, otherwise known as vitamin B2, can be more than a resource in your health show if you get enough of it. It takes on the job of stage manager in your body. The results? Other food substances may be used more efficiently.

Without this member of the vitamin B troupe protein foods cannot be properly used in the manufacture of new body cells and the repair of old ones. Riboflavin also helps set the pace in your show by assisting in the release of energy from fats and carbohydrates.

Liver, lean [illegible] milk, eggs and kidney are among the best food sources of this vitamin. Mushrooms, spinach and beet greens are also excellent sources.

In recent years riboflavin has constituted with other members of the B vitamin group in the enrichment of white flour and bread. Enriched white bread contains more riboflavin than most whole wheat breads.

NIACIN

Niacin has been front page news for some years in the world of nutrition science. It cannot work alone. But unless the food we eat contains plenty of this participant B vitamin we are apt to begin repeating history. The story we might expect would be that of the dread disease of pellagra which today has almost completely disappeared in this country.

Before niacin was discovered and before knowledge of its value in nutrition became widespread, strong often heralded the symptoms of pellagra: irritated skin resembling sunburn, intestinal disturbances and nervous disorders. In 1938 Dr. Tom D. Spies, a noted scientist, revealed in studies with humans that pellagra and niacin deficiencies were directly related.

Most people today are not likely to develop pellagra if they eat a well balanced diet. But those who have peculiar food likes and dislikes or those who follow freak diets or succumb to food fads may be courting trouble. To ensure getting your quota of niacin daily choose plenty of meat, dried peas and beans, spinach, eggs and enriched or whole grain cereals and breads.

PLYWOOD IS CHEAPER
For many of those building jobs because large panels go up quickly; less labor less nails. Weatherproof grade means all exterior uses. Plywood construction is stronger more rigid. Use plywood concrete forms for a smooth job and re-use the panels again on roof walls or subfloors. Right now you can get extra values in plywood.
DID YOU KNOW
We carry complete building materials for large and small orders. Sand gravel cement by the sack, drain tile sewer pipe on to-rode pipe and fireplace fittings. Builders hardware too. Sash cap Exterior wood edging all widths from 4" to 3" for variety of different woods from the floor.

TV TALK

By Bruce Lowther

Two big "firsts" today, when Nikita Khrushchev becomes the first Russian leader to be interviewed on U.S. television and Prince Philip becomes the first member of the Royal family to make a speech of any length on Canadian television.

There are many other good shows. Including the Palm Beach golf tournament, a different kind of Chevy show a new series by Victoria Shaw, Jerry Lewis with Steve Allen and two movies—Seventh Veil and Long Voyage Home.

Jack Webb recently complained that "when they say I'm a million, that's a lot of stuff." But since then, it has come to light that each of his first two movies, "Dragnet" and "Pete Kelly's Blues" grossed $1,600,000. Their total cost was $1,600,000.

"For the tenth time—may I leave the room?"

Webb incidentally is producing a series based on "Pete Kelly's Blues" to ABC as a series. Speaking of movie profits, Alan Ladd made $50,000 by sharing in the profits of "Boy On a Dolphin" and a stinker it was, too.

* * *

Next season may look to be a big one for westerns, but it seems the musical shows will be king instead.

New musicals will be Pat Boone, Guy Mitchell, Frank Sinatra and Patrice Munsel on ABC Big Record and the Double Bill Desi Arnaz variety show on CBS. Eddie Fisher and Gordon MacRae on NBC. And added to those are such standbys as Lux once Week, Voice of Firestone, Ed Sullivan, Hit Parade, Tennessee Ernie, Steve Allen, Chevy shows and the musical spectaculars.

* * *

According to Schwerin Research Corporation, a successful television show should do seven things.

It should leave the unified impression—show one door and mood, either emotional or logical; keep structure and order as unique as possible; have the video do the primary job with the audio supporting it; involve the viewer in what is presented; integrate entertainment with the product story, and present the story in the terms of the viewer not the product.

Can you think of one TV commercial that does all that?

THE VOICE OF ONE

By REV. DR. FRANK S. MORLEY

Impressed by the descriptions by Marcus Bach of the phenomenal growth of the Unity cult and by his claim that more than one-third of church members in the United States use Unity publications, my wife and I visited Unity Village outside Kansas City.

From the top of the tower we looked in awe upon the farms, motels, cottages, golf course, chapels and numerous buildings. We went through the mailing and printing departments where 450 people handle 6,000 pieces of mail daily, and send out 750,000 copies of the Daily Word monthly as well as thousands of other publications in 140 languages.

The heart of Unity is the prayer centre where the light burns in the window telling of continuous prayer in response to world-wide pleas.

Now undeniably much of their thinking is strained, but that is not the important fact. Unity has demonstrated beyond shadow of doubt that prayer has miraculous power in every area of living. Faith works. They have demonstrated a power in life, a "principle," which gives its dedicated believers "an abundant supply of all things necessary to meet every want without our making any of these things the object of our existence." This reminds us of Jesus' words, "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things will be added unto you."

A Vital Truth

They have demonstrated a vital truth, moreover, which every church must ponder and practice: unless a church is "inclusive" it will become nothing more than a stately monument as it has in much of Europe. The living church must penetrate secular life. It must deal with the total life of its membership. The problems of health, work, strength for living; recreation and mental peace must have a place on its program.

In my travels I try to visit dynamic churches. Invariably they are filled with an amazing variety of interests. Hennepin Avenue Methodist Church in Minneapolis, selected by The Christian Century in a study of creative churches, is typical.

It maintains a staff of four pastors, a pastoral assistant, a director of Christian education, three ministers of music, an executive secretary, four secretaries, five custodians, a housekeeper, an engineer and numerous part-time workers and teachers in its "University of Life" which has a program of activity and study as wide as human need.

Rev. Roy Burkhart of Columbus, Ohio, also has developed this concept of "The True Church" as an inclusive fellowship with a total life program. The great virility of the Mormon church stems from this relation of faith and life. Their churches are schools for living. The Roman Catholics have always stressed the communal nature of their church and have never renounced any area of human life.

He Talked of Life

Likewise Jesus had little to say about religion: He talked about life. "I am come that they might have life and have it more abundantly." He called Himself "the Way." His followers were called "The People of the Way." James described true religion as "visiting the fatherless and widows in their affliction" and "healing the sick." The Church of the New Testament was a community which cared for every member and had a total life interest.

"We talk about "going to church"—a killing phrase! It suggests a casual stroll through an art gallery. Some people say, "I don't get anything out of going to church." How on earth could they when they leave church with a mental wave to God, "See you again next Sunday perhaps. Same time. Same place?" When they merely "say" prayers and don't experience them? When they never enter into a vital fellowship?

If all a church contains for people is listening to sermons and paying tithes, it means nothing. A living church is a community where everyone is cared for, a dynamic source of the abundant life for all people.

Many Traffic Fines Doubled

City drivers will find themselves paying heavier penalties for certain traffic violations under terms of the new Motor Vehicle Act.

Magistrate Henry C. Hall has issued a list of offences, the fines for which may, with certain exceptions, be paid out of court.

Largest group in this list is a series of offences for which a fine of $10 may be paid out of court. Of the 24 offences included, 13 have the fine doubled or more than doubled from the old regulations.

ALL COST $10

Following are the offences for which the $10 fine may be paid out of court. Where the fine has been increased, the former fine is given in brackets:

Leaving car unattended with engine running; parking within 15 feet of fire hydrant ($5); failing to dim head lights; failing to observe speed limits on Johnson and Point Ellice bridges; 15-mile speed zones) over 20 miles an hour on the Roundabout.

No hand signal ($5); reverse direction and illegal Uturn ($5); speeding in school zones; passing stop signs ($5); passing traffic signals stop sign [illegible]

No automatic signalling device in compulsory cases; no chauffeur's licence ($5); no muffler; no rear light or reflector ($5); no rear-view mirror and no windshield wiper.

Bicycle failing to stop at stop sign ($2.50); bicycle failing to obey traffic signal ($2.50); no bicycle light, reflector or white fender ($2.50).

Licence plate not illuminated; no police chief's permit for chauffeur ($5); no red flag on load; driving on sidewalk or over sidewalk without stopping and yielding ($5); left turn on Douglas Street ($5).

Fine for riding a bicycle on the sidewalk, or for lacking a licence, is $2.50.

For speeding, the fine for exceeding 30 miles an hour will be $15 payable out of court, unless the offender has been paced by police at a speed of 45 miles an hour. Then the fine may not be paid out of court, but the person so charged must appear in court.

Magistrate Hall pointed out two other instances in which none of the fines above may be paid out of court.

Persons who have three previous notations of convictions on their driver's licence may not pay out of court.

Persons who have recorded against them a total of three previous convictions, including notations on licences and convictions for traffic offences other than those listed, may not pay their fines out of court.

Pedestrians are not forgotten in the list.

Any who disobey traffic signals, or jaywalk, are liable to a fine of $10 which may be paid out of court.

The Doctor's Viewpoint

Practise Prevention, You Won't Need Cure

Of all the life-saving medical devices that have been discovered most important is the branch of prevention of disease.

We have made greater progress than we realize. This has been due to the stress placed on public health and preventive medicine.

Fifty years ago our large hospitals each had smaller buildings attached called infectious wards. Here were bedded in crowded conditions, scores of patients suffering from diptheria, scarlet fever and other similar ills.

Death or crippling was all too often the result for those who entered those wards, and doctors were relatively helpless. Little could be done for the patients, the majority of them children, and what was even more tragic, nothing could be done to prevent the disease in the first place.

In those same days you would have seen the "pest-hous" where smallpox patients were kept. Tuberculosis was rampant across the nation. Milk was one of the filthiest foods, and soil and worms at the bottom of a can of milk being delivered in Vancouver were not uncommon.

This situation has changed and this is largely due to the efforts of public health doctors. Last year, and for many years, there was no diphtheria in Vancouver. Scarlet fever has become less serious than measles, and tuberculosis is under control.

In the case of TB, the number of cases has not always decreased each year—and this is important for it means that public health authorities have been successful in finding almost every case. Once found, and treated in the early stages, TB is no longer a frightening thing.

A BIG PART

Antibiotics have played a big part in this story, but without some means of finding the people with these diseases, educating everyone in prevention and keeping accurate records, we would not have been so successful.

Public health departments centralize and control the use of advances made by practical medicine. For example, the free vaccinations for children are done on a public basis, and the wholesale nature of these treatments has been the sole cause for the almost complete disappearance of smallpox.

Public health is part of the medical picture. It is a division of our profession, and the doctors who enter this work are trained first as physicians, and afterwards as specialists in public health. The fact that they usually end up working for various governments tends to make us forget that they are still doing medical work.

It happens that we have quite rightly decided that public health is a public responsibility, but it is not solely so.

"I MANAGE A COLONIST ROUTE BUSINESS"

Says Fred Rentz, of 147 North Park Street, who has been a Colonist Junior Merchant for the past two years. Fred is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Rentz and delivers route 1205 in the Hillside area. Delivering papers is not new to the Rentz family as Fred's two brothers Bob and Donald have both carried Colonist paper routes in the past.

Fred makes good use of his Colonist route earnings, buying a new bike and paying for his own clothes. He is also setting aside a portion of his money towards building a bank account.

Fred enjoys serving the many customers on his route and had this to say about his first business venture. "A Colonist route gives me plenty of spare time after school to participate in sports and school activities."

Fred has not definitely decided on his vocational plans but from his record as a Colonist carrier salesman we feel certain he will be a success in his chosen field.

APPLICATIONS ARE NOW BEING TAKEN FOR SUMMER REPLACEMENTS — IT'S FIRST COME — FIRST SERVED!

Slashing Of Nose Admitted

Robert Henry Jones, 2331 Trent, admitted in city police court yesterday that he cut a man's nose with a knife, which he said he used in the garden to cut dandelions.

After pleading guilty to a charge of assault causing bodily harm, Jones was remanded to next Thursday for a probation report.

Det. Deans Blackstock told court that Jones walked up to Edward William Talbot, 756 Cloverdale, and another man at Johnson and Broad about midnight Friday and accused them of taking some of his money.

"The accused then drew this knife and struck Talbot, cutting the left side of his nose," said the detective. "It was bleeding quite badly."

A short time later Const. William Sommerville came by on his beat and Jones handed him the knife. The policeman said Jones had been drinking.

Jones said: "I thought I was going to get beat up. I use that knife in the garden to cut dandelions. I should have left it off, I know."

On the first charge he was fined $25, on the second $35, and on the third $50.

The juvenile drove off West Saanich Road into a stump. A passenger, Shirley Corbett of Deep Cove, received a broken leg and facial lacerations that may mean the loss of one eye, police said.

Fined $5 and $3.50 costs for launching a boat from the Patricia Bay seaplane ramp without permission was John S. Boorman, 2930 Westdowne.

Following a near-collision between a landing seaplane and a boat a few weeks ago, Commissionaires and RCMP have cracked down on illegal use of the ramp.
